Pick 1,000 Acre Tract for New Airport

CAA SELECTS SITE NEXT TO CITY AIRFIELD

Engineers Say Mansfield Must Provide Land; Route 13 To Be Re-Located.

PLANS GIVEN MAYOR

Officials Predict Project Will Cost $1,400,000 By Time of Completion.

A 1,000-acre addition to Mansfield's present municipal airport was decided upon today by Civil Aeronautics Administration engineers in their program for development of a major port here.

The proposal was submitted to city officials this morning following a survey yesterday of two sites, the one adjacent to the present property, which was selected, and another farther north.

Engineers, who completed their studies this morning, submitted plans to Mayor W. J. Locke and left immediately for Chicago.

They expressed the opinion that although $600,000 has been appropriated by the government for the development of a Class 4 port, that CAA's contribution here would eventually amount to $1,400,000.

The mayor said the data compiled by CAA would be turned over to the legal committee of the Chamber of Commerce today for study.

The committee will be asked to advise the city on the procedure to be taken on these points:

1. Acquisition of 1,000 acres of land.
2. Rerouting of State Route 13.
3. Rerouting or closing of two county roads.
4. Removal of telephone and power lines.
5. Amount of city funds needed and what funds shall be used.

The committee has already expressed the opinion that the land will have to be acquired through condemnation proceedings, and the state highway department has said that Route 13 can be rerouted around the proposed site.

The city will have to act with all possible speed. CCA engineers said they would like to get the work started by Jan. 1, 1944.

U. S. Acts Under Anti-Strike Act, Probes Coal Tie-up.

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— The government made its first move under the Connally-Smith anti-strike act today by convening a special session of the federal grand jury here to inquire into the lingering coal strike that began June 20.

The number of idle miners in the rich southwestern Pennsylvania coal field, most of whose output goes directly to the war-busy steel mills, dwindled from 10,000 to an estimated 3,000. Only three captive or company-owned pits remained down.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt's statement yesterday that the mines would be returned to private owners as soon as possible recalled the warning of UMW President John L. Lewis that the truce under which the miners returned would "automatically terminate" if the operators took charge before signing a contract with the union.

STUKAS 'DONE'

Colonel Declares Vaunted Nazi Bomber Finished.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — An American anti-aircraft officer back from Tunisia expressed the opinion today that the Stuka, vaunted German dive bomber, "is all done."

Lt. Col. John C. Smith, of Billings, Mont., commander of an anti-aircraft battalion which destroyed at least 78 enemy planes and claims probables that would run the score well over 100, reported the Stukas are "slow, easy to watch and easy to hit."

ROMMEL KILLED, REPORT CLAIMS

German Underground Radio Says Marshal's Plane Shot Down In Flames.

(By United Press)

LONDON—The German underground radio station Atlantic was quoted today as saying that German Marshal Erwin Rommel was killed while flying to Sicily to take over command of its defenses.

Swedish dispatches reported the broadcast said that British fighters penetrated the strong fighter formation escorting Rommel's plane and sent it crashing into the sea in flames.

German Gen. Siegfried Westfal; two other German officers and three Italians also were killed, the broadcast said.

Though there was no confirmation of the report from any Allied or Axis source, a dispatch from an advanced Allied base in the Mediterranean yesterday reported that a heavily-escort enemy transport plane was shot down near Syracuse and crashed in flames. It was speculated that the plane carried high-ranking Axis personalities.

Rommel was given command over Axis defenses in southern France following his withdrawal from Tunisia in advance of its capture by Allied troops two months ago. At last reports, he was in Lyons, France, supervising the construction of defenses along the Rhone Valley invasion route into southern France.

Civilian Canned Fruit, Vegetables Supply Slashed

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The War Food Administration, now engaged in allocating the nation's prospective food supplyes where they will do the most good, announced today that in the next 12 months civilians will have to get along with 37 per cent less canned fruits and juices and 21 per cent less canned vegetables than they consumed in 1942.

The WFA tempered the bad news in the canned vegetable department, however, by estimating that the anticipated supply for civilians will be four per cent greater than average annual consumption in the 1935-39 period.

Under the allocation program for the year started July 1, the WFA said, civilians will receive nearly 70 per cent of the prospective supply of canned vegetables —including baked beans and baby foods—but only 53 per cent of canned fruits and juices.

Explaining that because of their "relative non-perishability

Junior Chamber, Ministers and PTA Groups Indicate They'll Seek To Help Juveniles.

CITE OTHER PROGRAMS

Boosters Cite Organization of Recreation Centers In Ohio Communities.

The "What to do?" appeal of Mansfield's juveniles struck a responsive chord among civic and welfare organizations today and indications were that a movement will soon get under way to give the city's youth an answer.

The situation arose yesterday when seven Mansfield boys were arraigned in juvenile court on charges of intoxication. In explaining how they spent their evenings, they told Judge Stuart H. Cramer they "attended shows two or three nights a week, bummed around the rest of the time." They stumped officials with the question "What else is there to do?"

Indications that a movement to establish a recreation center will be forthcoming in the near future were given in communications to The News-Journal today by three organizations, the Junior Association of Commerce, Mansfield Ministerial association and Parent-Teacher association.

James Eberly, former president of the J.A.C., said today that organization had been pushing the idea of a "teen-age dry night club" for two years.

"So far we have been blocked and stymied at every turn. The chief difficulty has been in finding available space in the city. There is suitable space available in Mansfield, but owners of such places either ask exorbitant rent or flatly refuse the space for such a purpose. In other quarters our plan has met with only indifferent response.

He pointed out that such a plan has been successfully operating in Ashland and Lorain, just two of the many cities where civic-minded persons have put the plan into operation.

Financial backing was cited as the big barrier which the Ministerial association came up against in trying to work out a plan for a community-wide rec-

TRUCKS ON FIRE

Four Destroyed In Blaze at Garage Early Today.

Fire of an undetermined origin early today swept through the R. O. Darling garage at 200 North Adams street, and destroyed four trucks. No estimate was made of the damage.

Firemen received the call at 12:23 a. m. and Companies Nos. 1 and 2 responded and battled the flames for nearly two hours.

The alarm was sounded by Elmer F. Balliett, 270 West Third street, an employe at the Ohio Public Service company, next door to the garage, who was attracted by the blaze.

Firemen said the flames were confined to the center of the street structure. The office at the front of the building was not damaged.

Two Sites Chosen, Plan Set Up For City Nursery Schools

As a result of the allocation of $19,215 in federal funds to the Mansfield Board of Education last week for the establishment of nursery schools for working parents, two schools will open July 26 at Carpenter and West Fifth Street school buildings, Superintendent W. L. Miller announced today.

Children of working parents between the ages of 2 to 6 may be admitted to the nursery schools, Supt. Miller said. He said each child enrolled must have been vaccinated against smallpox and have had a physical examination by the family physician.

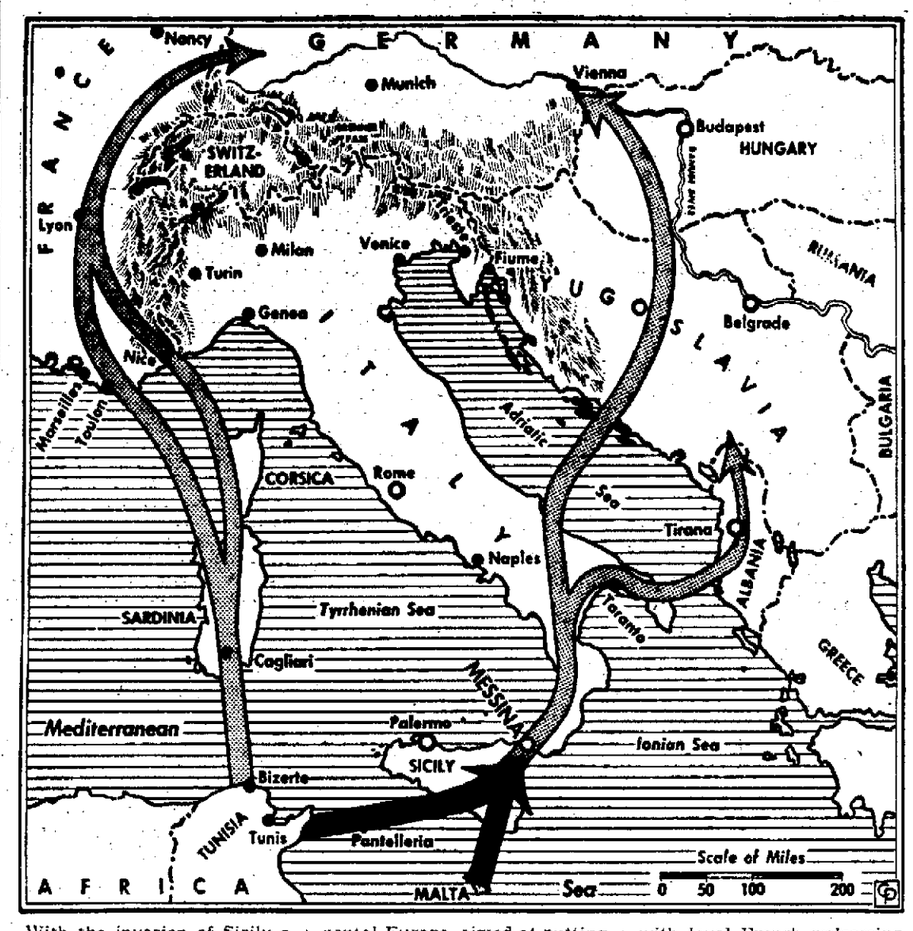
Fee for each child will be 50 cents per day and registration for entrance will be made in the office of the superintendent at John Simpson Junior High school during the week of July 19 between 1 and 4 p. m.

Superintendent Miller announced that the school will be operated during the day only and definite hours will be set up as soon as the registration is complete. Children will be fed the noon day meal in the nursery school.

Before qualifying for federal nursery school funds Mansfield had to show a need and industrial figures were supplied showing the increase in employment of mothers. However, Miller said, the schools will not be operated if there is not sufficient interest to warrant it. He said at least 20 children should be enrolled in each school for successful operation.

The announcement of the allocation of federal funds to Mansfield was made last week by Congressman J. Harry MacGregor of the 17th district. School officials applied for the funds last April.

Possible Invasion Routes Into Germany



With the invasion of Sicily a preliminary to the actual Allied invasion of the Axis-dominated European continent, military observers conjecture on what thrusts the onrushing Allies may take. This map shows possible invasion routes into continental Europe, aimed at putting the real "squeeze play" on the Nazis. The eastern drive may be through the plains and valleys of the western Balkans, to get away from the towering peaks and mountain barriers of the Alps. The western drive may be aimed through France, with loyal French welcoming a chance to go into action on the side of the Allies. Some observers believe an invasion of the Italian mainland could follow and then contact could be made with forces of Gen. Draga Mihailovich across the Adriatic from Jugoslavia.

Men and women manning the machines in the Mansfield Westinghouse plant's home front war of production received top recognition from the army and navy when the coveted Army-Navy "E" was unfurled at colorful ceremonies this afternoon.

Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Hanley, jr., of the U. S. Army Air Forces, in presenting the "E," urged workers not to be "deluded by the thought that time is on our side."

"We cannot coast along to victory," he said. "There is no time for relaxation or for the pleasant pursuits of peace. There is time only for war and the struggle for victory."

While navy fighter planes zoomed overhead, the ceremony took place on a flag-draped stage especially erected for the occasion at the plant's

East coast congressmen are demanding that the administration lift some of the restrictions on the use of gasoline by motorists and also want to know just what the plans are for fuel oil when cold weather comes.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Martinique, for many months the only French non-Axis-occupied territory to hold out against cooperating in the fight to liberate France, entered to the fold today and placed its ships and resources at the disposal of the United Nations.

Henri Hoppenot, delegate of the French committee of national liberation, was due to arrive at Fort De France today and formally take over from Admiral Georges Robert the authority he formerly exercised as French high commissioner of the Antilles.

SETS UP CITY PAY MAXIMUMS

War Labor Board Establishes Rates; Truck Driver Wage Affects 200 Here.

Maximum hourly wage rates for Mansfield and 37 other Ohio cities were set today by the regional War Labor Board in Cleveland.

The schedule fixed for Mansfield principally affects truck drivers for which a maximum wage of 82½ cents was fixed by the WLB.

Rudy Schneider, secretary-treasurer of the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers union, Local No. 40, said that if the WLB allows the maximum figure for Mansfield, nearly 200 grocery and moving van drivers and others operating light trucks would realize a wage increase of 12½ cents on the hour. The union and operators are now negotiating a new wage scale.

In its announcement the WLB made it plain that the board

City Employes Get Council Promise Of Pay Hike Study

Mansfield's 160 city employes had the promise of city council today that their request for a pay increase would be given careful consideration.

Representatives of the various departments were told last night at a meeting of council that the requests would be studied and that they could expect an answer soon.

"We cannot give you our answer tonight," C. N. Shultz, second ward councilman told the group. "But we will study the requests carefully and give you an answer."

The meeting was attended by approximately 30 workers, representing the various city departments. They based their plea for an increase in wages to meet the rising cost in living.

Several spokesmen pleaded with council to consider the request, submitted two weeks ago by firemen and policemen for a flat $35 a

Yanks Driving Inland, British Shell Catania

Railway Junction, Comiso, Olivo Fall To Americans Battling Strong Axis Opposition; Torpedo Boats Stab Into Strait of Messina.

BULLETIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA—(AP)—General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army driving up the Sicilian east coast from Augusta toward Catania is meeting only weak enemy resistance, it was announced late today.

(By Associated Press)

American troops in a great three-pronged advance have captured Comiso and Ponte Olivo—two of the 10 principal Italian air bases in Sicily—and the railway town of Naro in a westward thrust, it was officially announced today.

British forces on the east coast meanwhile continued their threatening advance from fallen Augusta upon the great seaport of Catania, and the Axis reported fierce fighting inland in the mountains.

Comiso lies just west of Ragusa in southeast Sicily, and Ponte Olivo is nine miles north of the U. S. bridgehead at Gela.

The fall of Naro represents a 15-mile strike inland northwest of Licata, extending the Allied holdings on the southern coast of the island to the west. Naro is only 12 miles east of the city of Agrigento.

The airfield at Catania, objective of the swift British advance up the east coast, was bombarded by warships the war bulletin said. It also confirmed capture of Augusta and Ragusa, first reported taken yesterday.

The British Eighth army march upon Catania continues.

Supporting the American drive, Allied warships also bombarded Porto Empedocle, three miles from Agrigento on the south coast and Ponte Olivo before it fell.

Stabbing into the narrow Messina strait, Allied motor boats engaged two enemy motor torpedo boats, driving them ashore burning, the communique added.

British troops marched into Augusta today after a British and a Greek destroyer had sailed into the harbor Monday afternoon.

Roughly one-tenth of Sicily has been over-run by the Allies, and they are approaching the Catania plain where great and decisive tank battles might be fought.

The Italians said Allied forces were penetrating into the mountains in southeastern Sicily, and that British troops pushing northward on the east coast were approaching Catania.

Meanwhile the air war against Germany was intensified with a smashing new assault upon Aachen.

A strong concentration of German troops was reported being rushed to positions athwart the line of the rapid British advance near Catania.

The American Seventh army was expanding its 60-mile front on the south Sicilian coast, joining with the Canadians and British for an unbroken front. The Americans were eager for battle with the crack German Hermann Goering division that they had bested in an attack Sunday.

Flying from Middle East bases, U. S. Liberators pounded nearly 425,000 pounds of bombs upon the Vibo Valentia airdrome near Reggio Calabria across the Strait of Messina, and upon Crotone airfield on the southern coast near the Gulf of Taranto.

The Italian communique said the Allies, steadily increasing their power, had "succeeded in passing the coastal strip between Licata and Augusta. The enemy is now thrusting towards the southeastern mountainous region of Sicily and is facing the Catania plain. Along the entire front Sicilian and German troops are engaged in hard fighting." Sinking of four Allied ships, including a destroyer, damaging six cruisers and torpe-

REELING: Nazis Hit by Heavy Counter Thrusts at Belgorod

(By Associated Press)

MOSCOW—German infantry and tank divisions have been pressed back on some sectors of the Belgorod front by Russian forces turning from defense to counterattack, a Soviet communique declared today.

The Red army launched its attack as the Germans reeled back after repeated and unsuccessful attempts to enlarge the wedge they had driven into the Russian lines at terrific cost in nine days of continuous fighting, the bulletin said.

The Russians declared the Nazis had "retreated with big losses," but it seemed apparent from front line dispatches that the Germans still were holding stubbornly to much of the territory which they gained in the fighting a week ago.

Elsewhere on the Belgorod-Orel-Kursk front the action lagged. German effort at the northern end of the front which flared into action July 5 had all but died out.

The Russian midnight communique said activity there was confined to an artillery and mortar duel with an occasional reconnaissance in force. The Russians placed the German loss in tanks at 50 with about 400 killed. At another sector artillery fire disabled 5 self-propelling guns, they said.

The day's losses in German tanks and planes in all sectors of

STALKING: U. S. Jungle Troops Moving In for Kill at Munda

(By Associated Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—Green-clad United States troops, in frequent gunfire exchanges with the enemy, moved stealthily forward through New Georgia's jungles today upon Munda.

It might well mark the beginning of the end of that Japanese air base.

The enemy's garrison there appeared doomed to fight it out with what men and weapons were on hand.

Reinforcement by sea had failed. Remnants of a Japanese task force fled the disastrous scene of the Kula gulf above Munda, leaving behind the sunken hulks of a cruiser and from three to five destroyers to add to nine others lost there a week ago.

Support by the Japanese air force also failed. Yesterday 18 enemy divebombers, protected by 10 Zeros, came over bent on pounding our positions. The raiders never reached their objective. American Corsairs and Lightnings slashed into them at Langsdale Point on New Georgia. Four Zeros and a Corsair, whose pilot parachuted to safety, were shot down. The bombers jettisoned their loads and fled.

Death rained daily on the garrison from swarms of American Avenger torpedo and Dauntless divebombers. Yesterday 32 tons of bombs burst among encamped White, longest record for women shop employes, and Harry Korb, longest service among foremen. Mr. Hawkins will deliver the address thanking Commander Bacon for the pins.

Commander Bacon was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1916, and served during World War 1 on the USS Pittsburgh, a flagship of the U. S. Army Cooks Are Taught Cooking Without Utensils

FORT BENNING, Ga.—(U.P.)—When the army cook goes to the battlefront the enemy shellfire is not going to worry him in the least.

At the Bakers and Cooks' school at Fort Benning every class is taught how to meet just such emergency when it is charged with the all-important task of keeping fighting men on the far-flung fronts well fed.

At the Fort Benning school the cook might come into the kitchen and find most all of the utensils destroyed. It is then his job to "drum" up the soldier's food with anything he can find at hand if it's nothing but a shovel and a tin tub.

And it's possible that he might even be taught to prepare a meal in a hole in the ground.

Col. John M. Rooks, commandant of the Bakers and Cooks' school, pointed out that when going into the field, American bakers and cooks are provided with the finest army equipment of its kind in the world.

However, he said, if it were necessary, the bakers and cooks could function under conditions that would make an Indian wonder what to do.

Cornell Mapping Post-War Food Plan For Greece

ITHICA, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Postwar plans to restore the food-producing facilities of Axis-plundered Greece are being developed at Cornell university, and upon completion will be submitted to Herbert H. Lehman, director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation.

Lehman, former Governor of New York state, has asked that the program be turned in as soon as possible. Both he and the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations of the U. S. Department of Agriculture have approved the proposed reconstruction project.

The work will involve a study of the feeding of both humans and livestock, of crops, of the immediate need of livestock for work, milk and meat, and a livestock improvement program for different sections of Greece.

A dreary picture of food conditions in Greece has been painted by the Greek government-in-exile in London. Its report states that milk production has decreased from an average of 272,000 tons a year ago to 30,000; eggs from 30,000 tons to 3,000; butter, virtually none; wheat, down from 700,000 to 400,000 tons; and all other cereals reduced from 660,000 to 295,000 tons.

FIRST FURLOUGH

BAINBRIDGE, Ga.—(INS)—Staff Sgt. Christopher Doyle, of the Bainbridge army air field, has set something of a record. He recently took his first furlough—after being in the army for three years.

To celebrate his third anniversary, he went home to Philadelphia, Pa.

Concert Pianist Had Troubles Reaching America.

CAMP BLANDING, Fla.—(INS)—A journey from German concert stage to concentration camp to "Boogie-woogie King" of a U. S. army dayroom tells the story of Pvt. Fred W. Marx of an M. P. detachment stationed at Blanding.

Born in Muenchen Gladbach, Germany, Marx studied under Teichmueller in Leipzig, where he was a concert pianist and orchestra leader for a radio station.

When he reached Belgium in his flight from the Nazis, the Belgian police, fearing an international incident, sought to return him to Germany. But the Belgian citizens helped him and he finally reached this country through the aid of the Red Cross.

In this country, he learned American music so well from a negro pianist that the boys in his outfit at Blanding chipped in to buy him a piano for the dayroom.

Sponsored in part by the Rockefeller Foundation in the interests of international good will and to help preserve those elements in the "way of life" for which men now fight, the Alberta folklore project is said to represent the first effort of this kind in that country to identify and perpetuate its past.

DRY CLEANERS FACE COLLAPSE, SAYS SECRETARY

Offers Plan To Make Industry 'Essential'; Would Obtain Workers, Boost Prices.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Suffering from contagious war ailments of manpower shortage, increased volume of business, and curtailed deliveries, the dry cleaning industry in Ohio will collapse in the next six months unless the government applies quick treatment to revive it.

This was forecast today by Victory Keys, executive secretary of the Ohio State Association of Cleaners and Dyers, who is launching his second campaign within six months to persuade the war manpower commission to declare the industry essential in areas with a 1,2, or 3 labor rating.

Should this be granted, consumers will undoubtedly get quicker service, but if Keys' plans work out, the price for dry cleaning will also be boosted. After completing his applications to declare the industry essential, he will ask the war labor board to grant wage increases in order to hold present employes and recruit new labor.

And, simultaneously, if the new wage increases are granted, he will request the office of Price Administration to approve price increases to offset the labor costs.

Prices frozen at the March, 1942 level left the cleaners charging depression prices, he asserted.

"There has been no increase in the cost of living for the public as far as dry cleaning is concerned," he pointed out. "It will be necessary to increase the prices in order to continue in the business."

The average time in Ohio it takes to have a garment cleaned and returned is 10 days, he said, but many places it is much longer. Men and women in uniform are given priorities while the cleaning of "frill" merchandise has been eliminated.

All of which means that women's evening clothes, and party dresses with inumerable pleats will have to go to the attic once they are soiled.

Causes of the "pathetic" cleaning situation are obvious, Keys asserted, in pointing out that cleaning business has increased by 25 per cent as a result of the large demands of the armed forces, increased needs of war workers for clean clothes, and the fact that the civilian population rushes garments to cleaners as a conservation means with the threat of clothes rationing imminent.

When you consider that deliveries have been cut down on an average of 50 or 60 per cent, employes have been lost to the more lucrative war industries at the rate of 15 to 20 per cent, and with a state average increase of 25 per cent in the volume of business, you have the answer to why your shouts of anguish for quicker service to the deliverymen are met with stony silence or a quick unloading of the cleaning problems.

Meanwhile, here are a few suggestions offered by Keys to help you as well as the cleaner.

1. Anticipate your cleaning needs. Try to keep garments going to the cleaner in a steady flow instead of letting it accumulate over a month's time and collecting everything in the house including "Aunt Jenny's" quilt made in '04.
2. Be reasonable. Don't send out garments that aren't usable.
3. Eliminate such merchandise as Junior's teddy bear and the ragged lamp shade, but send garments that you need and use every day.
4. Be more careful in what you buy. Find out before purchasing if it is shrink-proof and dyed fast, cleanable or launderable.

Although anticipating that it would go unheeded to those to whom it was directed, Keys suggested that women stop buying clothes for style or "eye-appeal" and buy only serviceable garments.

Presents 'E' Award to Plant

Major General Thomas J. Hanley, jr., son of Mansfield's T. J. Hanley, sr., and now commanding general of the United States Army Air Force southeast training command, presented the Army-Navy "E" flag to Westinghouse employes today at ceremonies at the plant. General Hanley came here from Maxwell field, his headquarters. His father, sitting on the platform during the presentation, heard his son make a speech for the first time.

ASHBAUGH HOST FOR 'E' GUESTS

Appliance Division Manager In Charge of Mansfield and Springfield Operations.

Host to high ranking military men and distinguished civilians at the Westinghouse Army-Navy "E" ceremonies today was J. H. Ashbaugh, manager of the Westinghouse electric appliance division.

Under the guidance of Ashbaugh, Works Manager C. L. Van Derau and Assistant Division Manager Reese Mills, the men and women of Westinghouse completely converted in less than a year from the manufacture of appliances to the all-out production of war tools—a performance that prompted the war department's Cleveland ordnance district to initiate the recommendation that earned Westinghouse its "E" award.

After working his way through Bliss Electrical school at Washington, D. C., Ashbaugh started his career with Westinghouse in 1918 by taking the company's graduate student course at East Pittsburgh, Pa. In addition to this technical training, he attended night school for three years at Carnegie Institute of Technology while working days at the Westinghouse plant.

Host at Ceremony

J. H. ASHBAUGH

For several years Ashbaugh designed instruments for aircraft communications equipment and control apparatus for power houses. In 1931 he became assistant manager of engineering at the company's East Springfield, Mass., plant, and a year later was named manager of engineering.

In the next few years he attained national recognition for his engineering work in connection with electric refrigeration and air conditioning equipment. In 1935 he was awarded the Westinghouse Order of Merit for distinguished service, and six years later he was appointed acting manager of manufacturing and engineering of the appliance division.

Today, as manager of the appliance division he is in charge of operations at both the Mansfield and East Springfield plants. The awarding of an Army-Navy pennant to the Mansfield plant makes the appliance division 100 per cent "E" as the East Springfield plant was so honored earlier this year.

K-9 CORPS

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—(INS)—It's a doggone shame, but Vicke and Peter, dachshunds belonging to Gertrude K. Whitman, a WAC, can't make the grade for the Wags.

Less than 10 inches high, they fail by a good six inches to meet army requirements for the Canine Corps.

They have qualified, however, for service with the K-9 Corps, organized for undersized dogs, at the Fourth WAC training center.

SEES TREND TO FARM

PASADENA, Cal.—(U.P.)—Agricultural Area Director Capt. William N. Cunningham reports that a definite "back-to-the farm" movement has set in. He states that 29 offices in his area have reported a definite trend for labor to go back on the farm, especially among the older people.

SOFTENING-UP of enemy airfields is exemplified perfectly in these photos taken of the Axis field at Milo, Sicily, while Allied planes were engaged in eliminating air opposition to the invasion of the island. ARMY TAKES TIP JERSEY CITY—(INS)—A tip from the hoboes has the army wearing cotton in Alaska, the Jersey City Quartermasters Depot reports.

Veteran polar explorers confirm the idea that keeping warm in the Arctic is mainly a matter of repelling wind and water. It was found that instead of one heavy garment, several layers of alternately cotton wool topped by a light, tightly woven water and wind resistant coat proved most satisfactory.

ORGANIZE

DAYTONA BEACH—(INS)—The WAC Mothers' association, newly organized in Pittsburgh, Pa., has already had letters requesting information from other cities throughout the country, so that they may form units of their own. The association hopes to become nationally represented so that they can offer their services to the WAC throughout the United States.

Suggestions may be sent to Mrs. William Snowden, 422 West street, Wilkinsburg, Pa., chairman of the advisory committee.

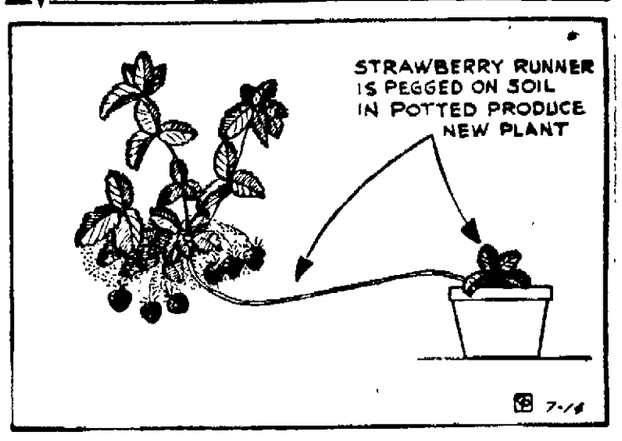
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Propagating Strawberries In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Released by Central Press Ass'n.

Many victory gardeners will want to increase their present strawberry bed and still others will want to start a berry patch when they realize the many advantages of growing strawberries on their own home grounds.

Strawberries have the highest vitamin C content of the more commonly grown small fruits. Strawberries also give a larger and the quickest fruit return for a smaller cost than any other fruit crop. They have the additional advantage of being adapted to either spring or fall planting. Certain varieties of strawberries are everbearing, producing fruit from June until frost comes.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, strawberries are propagated by layering. Runners are produced in great quantities. Only a few of the strongest should be used. Small pots two and one-half or three inches in size can be filled with good soil and plunged into the earth. The joint of the runner is placed on the soil in the pot. It can be pegged down with a hairpin. The roots will then grow into the pot. Pinch out any secondary runners it may endeavor to produce.

In about two to four weeks, when the roots of the new plant have developed the runner is cut away from the parent plant. The new plant can then be set into the strawberry bed.

CHEF 'RETIRES'

NEW YORK—(INS)—Lady, if you have faced a dinner with no potatoes in the pantry, all the week's meat coupons exhausted and with only a little macaroni and some green vegetables for a hungry family, then you can appreciate how Louis Seres feels.

Louis was head chef at New York's swank Hotel Biltmore since its opening until recently when shortages of food and ration problems drove him to take a rest. It was not retirement, he emphasized, because he would be back as soon as the food situation returned to normal.

by REX HESS

Young and lanky Larry Woodall Madden, hurler for the Prospect Park junior softball team, comes by his baseball heritage naturally, as you'd suspect after noting his middle name and remembering who it belonged to.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Madden, were living in Detroit at the time of Larry Woodall Madden's birth, in the same hotel which housed most of the Detroit Tiger baseball club.

That was in the day of Ty Cobb, Bobby Veach, Harry Heilman, Fat Fothergill, Larry Woodall et al—including a long list of pitchers who appeared regularly in relief roles. Remember?

The ball players had their own rooms in the hotel, of course, but these rooms were under the ever-checking eye of the tyrannous Tyrus Cobb, who liked to keep tab on the doings of his athletes.

But there was no rule that gave the tyrannous Tyrus entree to the Madden apartment. So the ball players slept in their rooms, but lived with the Maddens.

And on the day of the blessed event in the Madden family, came the word to the Tiger dugout along about the fifth inning: "It's a boy at the Maddens.

Harry Heilman was next up, and amid exhortations of "Hit one for the kid, Harry," the great Heilman parked one out of the lot.

When I saw the picture of Paul Rockwell, former Mt. Vernon lightweight fighter, and convalescing hero of the sinking of the Yorktown, in Sunday's paper, I asked the members of the N-J staff: "Where do you get this name: Carl Rockwell."

"That's the way it was given to us," they told me. And no matter the fact that I informed them I had known the guy for years and years, and everyone in Mt. Vernon knew him as Paul, they still maintained it was Carl.

So the first time I see Rockie I ask him:

"What's with this Carl business like it says in the paper?"

"That was a new one on me to," says he. "When I joined the navy they looked up my birth certificate, and there it was—Carl. I didn't know my name was Carl."

Ah, well Fighter Fritzie Zivic's name on his birth certificate is: "Mary, 8 pounds, female." But Fritzie Zivic's name isn't Mary.

Three Stake Races Carded

Two-Year-Old Trot Booked at Randall.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Three stake races, one the $3,703 National for two-year-old trotters, make up today's Grand Circuit program at North Randall track, with a $500 event for 2:19 pacers tossed in for good measure.

A tragic note entered Grand Circuit activities last night when Charles H. Wilkinson, 61-year-old Logansport, Ind., manufacturer and sportsman, died of a heart attack while dining in the Acacia Country club.

Wilkinson's death occurred a few hours after Attorney, from his Wilco farms stables, had dashed to a straight heat triumph in the feature Geers pacing stake, a $5,000 race.

The Indiana industrialist was a native of Ohio, and president of the Logansport, Ind., Machine Co. This was his first season as a Grand Circuit competitor, and shortly before the opening of the current meeting he paid $15,000 for Austin Hanover, a Hambletonian candidate.

Attorney won the feature stake yesterday by besting the favored Good Bye and six other pacers, fashioning mile heats in 2:05 and 2:06½.

Sep Palin drove to a triumph in the $1,000 Peninsula farm stake for trotters behind Worthy Boy, traveling mile heats in 2:05¼ and 2:06¾. Hava Hanover placed in the first whirl and Juarez was second in the finale.

Cooper Blasted Again

Most Frustrated Man In Major Leagues.

By LAWTON CARVER
(INS Sports Editor)

PHILADELPHIA — The most bitterly frustrated big-timer in baseball today is Morton Cecil Cooper, of Webster Groves, Mo., the beloved "cousin" of the American leaguers who knocked him daffy last night for the fourth straight time in a year's stretch between all-star games. The 5 to 3 defeat suffered by the Nationals here under the Shibe park lights was decisive far beyond that margin of only two runs.

Billy Southworth, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom Cooper toils, and likewise leader of the beaten National league stars, painfully shook his head like a man who had just been hit with a blunt instrument as he slowly peeled off his clothes after the trouncing.

"Cooper's a better pitcher than that—far better. He's one of the greatest day in and day out," Southworth said, "I can't understand it."

Cooper himself is just as puzzled over his stark failure in the big spots—in the all-star game of last year when Lou Boudreau and Rudy York nicked him for first inning homers to start him to defeat; in the world series last fall when the Yankees beat him in the only game they won and drove him to cover in another that they ultimatedly lost to his successor, and now this.

In his 18⅓ innings against American leaguers his earned run average is an unbelievable 8.00, for last season in the National league it was 1.77.

What happened to him last night was a sudden attack of Bobby Doerr, second baseman of the Boston Red Sox, armed with a bat in the second inning.

The Nationals had nicked Dutch Leonard, Washington knuckleballer and the game's winning pitcher, for a first inning run on singles by Stan Hack, Cubs' third baseman, and Billy Herman, Dodger second baseman, followed by a run-producing fly propelled into the far reaches by Stan Musial, Cardinal outfielder.

Although Cooper got into trouble immediately in the second half of the frame when he hit George Case, Washington outfielder, with his very first pitch, he wormed his way out of it by striking Ken Keltner, Indian third sacker, and getting the next two on easy grounders.

Leonard then held the Nationals in the second and Cooper got his lumps in the underside of that frame when Doerr blasted a curve into the left field stands with Chet Laabs, Browns' outfielder, and Jake Early, Senator catcher, on base as a result of walks.

That was it. The Nationals never caught up, and never really came close to it the rest of the way, and Cooper was driven off the mound in the third when Keltner and Dick Wakefield, Tiger rookie outfielder, his successive doubles for another run and Verne Stephens, Browns' shortstop, sacrificed to move Wakefield to third.

Southworth had the unpleasant duty of going out and taking his own big pitcher out of the game, and in came Johnny Vander Meer, the Cincinnati southpaw with the rifleball. He struck out pinch-hitter Rudy York and Laabs to end that, and made it three strikeouts in a row by getting Early in the next frame.

But by this time the game really was over and every one in the crowd of 31,938 knew it and could hope only for incidental thrills the rest of the way. The demise of Cooper was the demise of the National's chances, and they were beaten for the eighth time in eleven all-star starts.

And it wasn't a New York Yankee dominated victory as it has been so often in the past. Manager Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks and of the American leaguers, didn't use a single man from his own team and explained it by saying simply "that he didn't need them."

As for his starting Dutch Leonard when speculation centered around two or three others, he admitted that he had Leonard in mind all the time "because there isn't a knckle ball in the National league like his." McCarthy wanted somebody to hold the Nationals until his own side could get going—as Doerr did in the second.

After he hit that homer to put his side in front by 3 to 1 and Keltner and Wakefield had collaborated with their doubles for another in the third, the Americans got their last score off Vander Meer in the fifth when Case opened with a walk and with two down on strikeouts behind him, Stephens singled. The latter promptly broke for second and Case for home on a double steal, which succeeded with the aid of a wild throw by German back to Catcher Walker Cooper.

The ball rolled between the latter's legs as Case tore into the plate and the miseries of the Cooper brothers were multiplied. Walker went down with a slightly cut and badly bruised knee and left the game after Vander Meer finally retired the side by scoring his sixth strikeout in 2⅓ innings.

The rest of the scoring for the night was confined strictly to the efforts of Vince DiMaggio, Pirate outfielder, who led both teams in hitting with a useless single, a left field triple in the seventh, which was turned into a run by Dixie Walker's fly, and a home run in the ninth with the sacks empty.

All great, but futile in the final accounting, for by this time Mort Cooper was bathed and dressed and mourning his defeat.

ALL-STARS RAISE FUND OF $115,174 FOR BATS

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — The all-star game sent $115,174 tinkling on its way to buy baseball equipment for service men, final totals on receipts revealed today.

Paid admissions totalled $65,174, with radio rights, Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis' office, and the Major league clubs supplying the rest.

Senators Get Green Light

Can Play All Night Games They Desire.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

PHILADELPHIA — (INS) — In a down town hotel yesterday, the American league, always a pretty stuffy and stodgy organization, took a most significant step. It first listened to Clark Griffith, the exemplar of piety and the frugal way of life, and then gave him carte blanche in the matter of playing any or all of his remaining 30 Washington home games after nightfall, if he so wishes.

He probably will so wish, since he's the guy who started the agitation which led to the step in question.

A few hours later at Shibe Park, the two major leagues played their chaste and hallowed event, the all-star game, at night for the first time. But, without any reasonable doubt, not for the last.

Quite so, the 1942 all star game at the Polo grounds was a twilight promotion, which blundered into night time play in some manner beyond the control of the management, a state of affairs which does not in any way affect the fact that this was the first all star game played at night by intention, design and wish. Nor does it alter the fact that major league baseball is headed, as sure as rat poison, toward night play as a general thing.

That is, if it is endowed with even a fair degree of gumption, a provision we shall steadfastly pass on by without comment except to say that your guess is as good as ours.

There are no plans on the thing. The major leagues seldom do business that way, being content to believe that their sucker-appeal will overcome all obstacles and that the old racket will endure in spite of a changing world which runs to air-conditioned movies, blond-conditioned pubs and various daytime attractions that have no bearing on baseball.

In point of fact, we met a National league man last night who resolutely spurned the merest suggestion that night baseball, on a basis of 75 per cent of all scheduled games, might be in the making.

But Sam Breadon, the St. Louis owner, had previously discussed the thing without visible pangs and, in fact, with some show of satisfaction.

"I saw 10 years ago what it (night baseball) did for our big farm clubs at Houston and Rochester," he said.

"And, seeing this, I knew that we in the majors would be coming to night baseball in our turn—not as a stunt, but as a sound business move. I see now where it must end up by an awful lot of big league baseball being played at night.

"Why, it makes every day just seem like Sunday."

What he's talking about there is the exchequer, which reacts in a very interesting way on Sundays and at nights, when people are available in greatly desirable numbers. And that's the purpose of baseball, to play ball before the greater number.

Carbetta Fights At Rubber Bowl

Paul Carbetta, Mansfield featherweight boxer who is due for early induction in the army, will have at least one last fling at the fistic wars before he goes in for more important battling.

Carbetta has been scheduled for a six-round preliminary scrap with Pete Bullo of Detroit at 126 pounds at the Akron Rubber Bowl tomorrow night.

The first fight show ever staged in the Bowl features Akron Middleweight George Kochan against Ozzie "Bulldog" Harris of Pittsburgh. Kochan, who made his reputation in the east where he is serving in the coast guard, will be making his first Akron appearance since hitting the big time. Two 10-round bouts and four sixes make up the card.

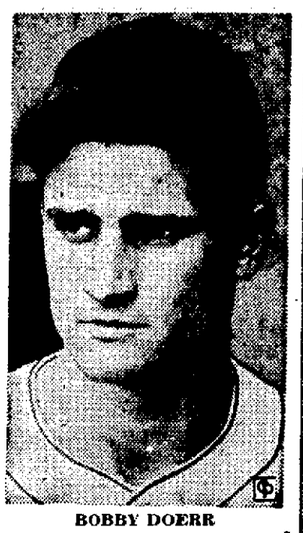
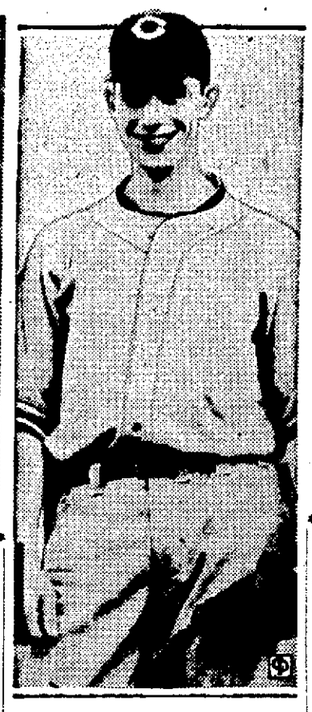
Here Are Real Stars of All-Star Game



BOBBY DOERR



VINCE DIMAGGIO

JOHNNY VANDER MEER

Real stars of the all-star baseball game last night in Philadelphia are shown here. Bobby Doerr's three-run homer sewed up the victory for the American league. Vince DiMaggio, keeping a great name bright for his brothers Joe and Dominic in service, hit in succession a single, triple and home run. And Johnny Vander Meer fanned six of the American leaguers, three of them in a row.

Hitler Proven Right Once

America Is Nation of Baseball Players.

By JACK CUDDY

PHILADELPHIA—(U.P.)—Donald L. Barnes, president of the St. Louis Browns, said "naturally, I was glad to see the American league beat the National league in the all-star game, but let me emphasize that the game itself was a far greater triumph than could be reflected by any score.

"You will recall that Hitler remarked disparagingly in his Mein Kampf that we Americans are a nation of baseball players. Last night's spectacle at Shibe Park proved again that Hitler was right — unfortunately for Hitler."

Barnes, a smallish, pudgy, middle-aged chap with graying hair and a pugged nose, reviewed the contest with a group of sports writers and baseball executives, including Horace Stoneham of the Giants and Bill Cox of the Phillies.

The listened to Barnes with president, because he is known as the "fan president"—a man with a passion for baseball that has cost him "plenty" of money during each of the seven years since he and his friends purchased the apparently hopeless Browns from the Phil Ball estate in 1936.

They listened to a self-made millionaire —a fellow who had pulled himself up by his own boot straps from the wrong side of the tracks at Springfield, Ill., to blossom 14 years ago as a genius in the personal-loan business.

Barnes said, "I suppose I should talk of last night's game from the technical angle or discuss Luke Sewell's apology to the American league for his quotations that offended the umpires. But the other angles of the Shibe Park show seem much more important.

"That really was a 'dream game' staged for the benefit of the baseball equipment fund for our men in service—staged to help keep alive the tradition among men in uniform at home and abroad that we are a nation of ball players.

"Baseball is our national sport. It typifies our American way of life—live clean, fight hard for your rights and obey proper authority. That philisophy makes top-notch citizens and top-notch fighting men.

"Hitler might well study this game of baseball — the idealistic sport that furnishes physical and mental relaxation for our young men at home and abroad—the sport that still provides refreshing enjoyment for our nation after nearly 20 months of war.

Hitler should have seen the 32,000 fans at Shibe Park last night and the hundreds turned away. There might be a revision in Mein Kamf."

Barnes said he hoped baseball could continue as long as it helped the war effort. "But if the time comes when it is impractical to continues the game, from the military viewpoint, then it should cease for a time. Its spirit and ideals will carry on for years."

Kushins Meet In Star Tilt

Al Shades Carl as Both Break Par Figures.

The brothers Kushin clashed in the feature fracas of the News-Journal golf league at Possum Run last evening, with Possum champion Al Kushin edging Carl in a match which saw Al trimming two strokes from par with a 34, and Carl coming in with a 35, one under par.

It was a good night for scoring, Joe Mayer also getting a 34, Carl Wiseman a 35, and Grant Hanawalt an even-par 36.

In the only extra hole match Norton defeated Strome on the 11th green.

Smokehouse bumped loop-leading Globe Steel 2-1, Richland Printing climbed into second place with a 3-0 win over Gorman-Rupp, Barnes & Schmid scored a 3-2 victory over Long Bar, and Tucker Furniture defeated Orr Typewriter 2-1.

SOUTHPAW ERNIE WHITE LOST TO CARDINALS

ST. LOUIS—(U.P.)—The pennant hopes of the St. Louis Cardinals received a considerable jolt today when it was learned that Southpaw Ernie White will be lost to the club indefinitely because of bursitis of the left shoulder.

Dr. R. F. Hyland, team physician, said he had found the fluid sac around the shoulder joint inflamed. He added that he could not predict when White would pitch again.

The Babe? Sure Is, Brother!

Say, Joe, is that Babe Ruth up there swinging. No need to ask, brother, for it's the Babe and he's hitting one even if it is an out. The Babe, out of baseball since 1935, batted as a pinch hitter during a servicemen's game with Boston Braves in Boston.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—"When you have two men on and someone hits a home run, the damage is done," remarked Billy Southworth, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and the National league All-Stars . . . And that just about sums up last night's game in which the National leaguers took their customary shellacking from the American leaguers . . . Things looked quite rosy for the senior circuit until Mort Cooper walked a couple of guys in the second and along came Bobby (The Swinging Doerr and Boom!) . . . Then the ball game was practically over . . . But just to show you what optimists these baseball players are, the losers came into the dressing room talking about how hard Bill Herman hit a liner in the ninth and what might have happened if it had been a few feet higher.

QUOTE, UNQUOTE

More from Southworth: "This isn't like a world series. Seems like we ought to have a few more games. I'm just getting warmed up." . . . And, discussing his decision to Yank Mort Cooper off the Hill before his three-inning stint: "I'm glad it was one of my own men. I felt more free to take him out." . . . Joe McCarthy, who wasn't especially jubilant about getting square with Southworth for what happened last fall in the world series: "Don't bother me. I've got to dress and catch a train."

SHIBE PARK SHIVAREE

Before last night's game someone automatically asked: "Who's pitching for the Yankees?" . . . But there wasn't a Yankee in the ball game for the first time in all-star history . . . Maybe the Yanks weren't needed this year—or maybe their absence reflects the closeness of the American league race . . . Remember a few years ago when the National league was having a tight one there was quite a fuss about whether pitchers should be saved for the big game or saved for the tilts that really count.

CLEANING THE CUFF

The ball players don't get any pay for the all-star games, but they get into the park free and get two extra tickets thrown in. . . . For the first time non-workers were admitted to the press box . . . There wern't enough scribes to fill the 300-odd seats, the rest were sold to bring in a few more bucks for the baseball equipment fund.

Haegg Predicts Mile In 4:07

SAN FRANCISCO—(U.P.)— Gunder Haegg admitted today that he "might" run the mile in 4:07 or better when he competes against Gil Dodds again Saturday for the Army Air Forces' Benefit fund.

Previously, the pessimistic Swede said he probably would do no better than 4:10.

"I am in better condition than I thought," Haegg said through an interpreter as he left for Palo Alto for workouts on the Stanford University track. "I know I'll have to go under 4:08 to beat Gil Dodds."

* * *

When Haegg established a world's record of 4:04.6 for the mile in Sweden last summer he ran the last two laps in 2:00.2. His countryman, Arne Andersson, lowered the mark to 4:02.6.

Favors Alsab In Race With Count

RICHMOND, Va.—(U.P.)—Which is the greater horse—Alsab, Whirlaway or the present Kentucky Derby and Preakness champion, fleet-footed Count Fleet?

Lieutenant Dan Sabath, son of Al Sabath, owner of Alsab, likes his father's nag the best.

"I think that weight for weight and age for age, Alsab is the best horse," said Lieutenant Sabath, now stationed at the Bellwood army depot here.

"Of course, Count Fleet is a great horse," he said. "I saw him run when he was a two-year-old and he undoubtedly has a great burst of early speed and can hold his lead."

Young Sabath still isn't convinced, however, that the Count has had any real competition.

American Leaguers Win Without Yanks

Bobby Doerr's Three-Run Homer Sews Up All-Star Game Victory.

By SID FEDER

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—The American league finally has proved it doesn't need the Yankees—as long as it can do the bombers' tricks with a bat.

This, naturally, is the home-run or a reasonable facsimile thereof—a Yankee specialty from 'way back in baseball. And, while Manager Joe McCarthy didn't use a single member of his bomber brigade in knocking off the National leaguers 5 to 3 last night in the 11th edition of the All-Star slugging party, the way it happened made you look quick to be sure it wasn't a Yankee putting on the crusher.

But this time it was Robert Pershing Doerr, the Los Angeles "Lulu" who has been playing a lot of infield for the Boston Red Sox, but has more or less been the second-base shadow cast by the Yanks' Joe Gordon for several seasons. Joe the Flash was just the "American league bench jockey" last night, and the Nationals went out in front with a run in the first inning and were just bouncing along behind Mort Cooper.

Then, in the second, before you or the 31,938 cash customers knew what was cooking, Mort's fireball lost its control for a couple of innings and he walked Chet Laabs, the St. Louis Brownies' nimble fly-chaser, and Jake Early, Washington's work horse catcher.

Then up stepped Robert Pershing and aimed one at the left field stands, and it just barely gasped its way into the lower seats. A yard shorter, and it would been only a fly out.

That was your ball game, and the Americans simply ambled to their eighth win in the 11 All-Star games.

In the third chapter, a pair of pounding doubles produced another run. And if that didn't settle the issue, the only guy among the 20 National leaguers in the game who looked as if he would just as soon have a bat as a tommy-gun in a tight spot was Vince DiMaggio of Pittsburgh. He got into the game in the third inning and poked a single into left. In the seventh, he tripled and came home on Dixie Walker's pinch fly. And in the ninth, he hit the hardest ball of the night, well into the upper stands in left field.

There were five Yankees on the bench—and they stayed there, because, as Manager McCarthy put it, "We got out in front quick, and we didn't need 'em."

Johnny Vander Meer, the old double-no-hit kid of the Cincinnati Reds, was called on to take over for Cooper in the third with one run in, one on and one out, and he fanned Rudy York and Laabs to end that inning. From there, he fanned four more in the next frames and wound up with a total of 11 strikeouts for his two All-Star elbowing appearances, thereby equalling Carl Hubbell's record.

It was a convincing American league victory, even to the older members of the National league cheering and chowder society.

When you come right down to it, Manager Billy the Kid Southworth had the right answer.

"We just didn't get those long ones—and we didn't get 'em in bunches," he said.

Rickey Talks To Durocher

No More Nonsense, Says Branch the Brain.

By JOHN CASHMAN

NEW YORK—(INS)—The gravest conference in the embattled career of Brooklyn Dodgers' Manager Leo Durocher is scheduled to be held today.

Branch Rickey, his boss, is expected to call him in and (1) Fire him, (2) Accept his resignation, or (3) Institute a general toning down of "the lip" in a move to preclude a recurrence of the bickering and near-insurrection that rocked the club over the week-end.

Rickey has declined to comment in advance on what, if anything is to take place, but that something is brewing in Flatbush was evident when Rickey rushed back from the major league festivities at Philadelphia without even waiting to see the all-star game.

One published report had it that Durocher definitely is out—by resignation, and that a successor for the rest of the season is to be named today, a successor who will be burdened with ending the rebellion and trying to put the Dodgers back in the pennant race with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Rickey already has announced that he will tolerate no more of the nonsense that disrupted the even tenor of the Dodgers' ways last Saturday.

Presumably he means to straighten the matter out now once and for all.

If Rickey does not fire Durocher outright (which appears improbable at this time) he will make Leo tone down. Rickey tried this at the start of the 1943 season, but apparently Leo did not take Brother Rickey's suggestions to heart, for it is Durocher's loud tongue lashings which caused the riot.

Leaders Match Big Innings

Indianapolis and Brewers Battle For Top Rung.

(By Associated Press)

Indianapolis and Milwaukee are engaged in such a redhot fight in the American Association race that not only are they still tied for first place but they also are going in for identical big single-inning splurges to pull down those victories.

Milwaukee's was a bit more sensational because its five markers were clustered in the ninth to break a 1 to 1 deadlock and bring the Brewers a 6 to 1 triumph over the seventh-place Louisville Colonels.

Indianapolis, trailing last-place Kansas City 3 to 2 going into the last of the fourth, poured across five runs. But the Blues made two runs in the fifth and two more in the eighth to tie the count at 7 to 7. The Tribe fetched home another run in its half of the eighth, however, and won 8 to 7.

Third-place Columbus divided a pair with fifth-place Minneapolis, copping the first, 6 to 2, and losing the second, 4 to 3.

The St. Paul Saints grabbed the opener against Toledo, 6 to 5, but the Mudhens took the second, 5 to 4.

The liberty ship, Edward L. Grant, was named for the former Giant killed in World war I.

Charges Wallace Circumvents Constitution In BEW Job

SENATOR HITS JONES FEUD AS 'EROSION'

Raps Advisability of Using Supreme Court Justices on 'Kitchen Cabinet.'

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON —Sen. Alexander Wiley (R) Wis., today charged that Vice President Henry A. Wallace is circumventing the Constitution by acting as chairman of the board of economic warfare.

Wiley called for a congressional investigation into Wallace's chairmanship of BEW and also challenged the advisability of supreme court justices being members of a "kitchen cabinet" advising on legislative matters.

Wiley also called for the creation of a real war cabinet stating that the lack of such a group is hampering "our domestic war effort."

The senator said that the feud between Vice President Wallace and Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones over acquisition of critical and strategic material "again highlights the gradual erosion of our system of three branches of government." These separate branches, he emphasized, are the executive, legislative and judicial.

"The entire quarrel was so spectacular that this phase of it went almost unnoticed despite its importance," said Wiley.

"One basic question which should be asked is: 'How is it that a member of the senate—the vice president—can hold a separate office under the executive branch?'

"In case of a tie vote, the vice president can vote in the senate not only on policy, but also on appropriations. How can he be head of an executive office (BEW) which comes to congress for funds and authority?

"For that matter, is it sound public policy to make supreme court justices members of an informal 'kitchen cabinet' advising on legislative policy which may some day come before the court? Of course the justices would not have to participate in such decisions but that is not the same as a clear-cut separation of our three governmental branches.

"This whole question of the insidious destruction of our form of three branches of government should be made the subject of congressional scrutiny and recommendation. Certainly that study ought to include a check on how the vice president, a member of the senate, could circumvent the clearly defined intent of the constitution.

"There is one other glaring aspect to the Wallace-Jones battle.

"The entire public disagreement illustrates graphically the need for a real war cabinet where the squabbles and frictions which hamper our domestic war effort could be ironed out in the earliest stages and a workable policy evolve."

The board of economic warfare, of which Wallace is chairman, received an appropriation of $36,500,000 to pay its administrative expenses for the new fiscal year. The vice president was reported to be extremely pleased because this was one of the few war agencies to escape a cut in budget estimates.

While the bill necessarily passed the senate, there was no controversy over the BEW funds. There were, however, some close votes both in senate and house on other phases of the war agencies bill which carried the BEW funds.

Wiley did not mention names of any supreme court justices. It has been widely reported that Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter is one of the president's chief advisers on far-reaching policy.

ATLANTIC CHARTER TO STAND AS WRITTEN, CHURCHILL DECLARES

LONDON—(U.P.)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill told commons today that the Atlantic charter would stand as written, despite suggestions that it needed revision in order to protect Allied interests in establishing the peace.

In the course of parliamentary debate, Major Maurice Petherick, Conservative, asked: "Considering the fact that the Atlantic charter has not been ratified by the American congress and the apprehension which exists in this and Allied countries that some of its clauses will gravely hamper the freedom of action of the United Nations in settling the terms of peace will the prime minister start negotiations for its amendment."

"No sir," Churchill answered.

"In view of the fact that the Atlantic Charter has not been ratified in the United States and perhaps doesn't call for ratification, has it any binding force on peace treaties which might follow the war?" Petherick asked.

"The so-called Atlantic Charter—and I think it is well called the Atlantic Charter—was not a treaty requiring ratification or any formal endorsement of constitutional character on either side of the Atlantic," Churchill said. "It was a statement of certain broad views and principles which are our common guide in our forward march."

"Is the prime minister not aware that the first two clauses of the Atlantic Charter do in fact bind the Allied powers in a way which may be highly perilous when the peace treaty falls to be discussed?" Petherick asked.

"We have got many worse worries than that," Churchill answered.

The clauses to which Petherick referred state that the United States and Great Britain seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other, and desire to see no territorial changes that do not accord with the freely expressed wishes of the peoples concerned.

Urges Advertising To End Slump In War Production

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Donald M. Nelson urged American business today to throw its weight, through war message advertising, into the effort to shake off a production slump—caused in part, he said, by "a false and dangerously promature feeling that the war is in the bag."

The war production board (WPB) chairman, participating with other high officials in a broadcast launching the war advertising council's drive for "a war message in every ad," disclosed that June war production missed its $6,500,000,000 goal by one-half billion dollars.

"In order to meet the urgent demands of the armed services," huge production goals were set for 1943," Nelson said. "We are not currently meeting those goals from month to month. We are gaining in total output but that is not rising fast enough to meet the steady rise in our production goals.

"Production in May was unsatisfactory. Production in June, although better than in May, still did not show much improvement.

"I want to state bluntly, here and now, that if we are to meet our overall schedules for 1943, the American industrial front faces a staggering job in the months ahead.

LABOR-DRAFT BILL REPORTED ON FDR'S DESK

Washington Hears President Studies Measure, Officials Worry Over Manpower.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The Austin-Wadsworth labor draft bill today was reported to have reached President Roosevelt's desk for a personal study as high officials showed increasing worry over the manpower situation.

While Mr. Roosevelt has refrained from endorsing the proposed legislation, authoritative congressional sources said that an administration decision on the issue is certain within the next two months.

The issue, however, may be forced in congress unless a manpower policy for the duration is previously prepared and submitted by the administration.

Sen. Robert Reynolds (D.) N. C., chairman of the senate military affairs committee, forecast a showdown on the question in the fall. The Austin-Wadsworth bill has been subject of lengthy hearings by this committee.

"I am sure that authors of the bill will ask for consideration," he said. "The most important question before us is that of manpower.

"We are going to have a lot of casualties. As we advance we must have more ammunition and food.

"I do not believe that there is going to be any reduction in the program for armed forces of 11,000,000 men, and we must gear our manpower needs to this program."

While the military affairs committee, just before the congressional recess, voted to recommend passage of the Wheeler bill deferring fathers from the draft until Jan. 1, 1944. Reynolds said this did not necessarily mean legislative action.

"This report was a suggestion to keep hands off fathers until other policies are settled," he said.

"The real key to the drafting of fathers is found in the Russian situation. If Russia holds or drives back the Axis the pressure is eased, but if the Germans gain our strategy must be made accordingly.

"Decisive action on the Russian front, one way or the other, probably would have more effect on the draft situation than any one other development."

With Food Administrator Jones seeking increased crop acreage next year and the war production board foreseeing no lessening of the demand for arms production, it appeared that the manpower demand may increase rather than be eased.

SOME LEADERS SHOW GAIN IN STEADY MARKET

Cash Dividend Payments For First Half Drop Slightly Under 1942 Figures.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stocks were generally steady with a number of leaders showing fractional advances in today's early market dealings

At a moderately active opening better prices were paid for Chrysler, American Telephone, Standard Oil (N.J.), N. Y. Central, and American Airlines. Johns-Manville and Douglas Aircraft started a little lower.

Attracting attention in boardrooms was the commerce department's compilation of cash dividend payments for the first half of the year. Total for this period of $1,576,000,000, or slightly under the figure for the like figure of last year. June payments were 5 per cent larger than the same month in 1942

YANKS TAKE 3 TOWNS IN HARD SICILIAN PUSH

doing of four other destroyers also were claimed.

Available reports indicated the Allies were in general control of some 1,000 square miles or more in Sicily—the southeastern corner and coastal strips in each direction—after four days of battle. But the most difficult fighting still lay ahead.

Bold Allied strategy of new multiple landings—such as at Augusta and near Catania—not only sped the British advance but appeared to be keeping the Axis defenders off guard, afraid to throw all their strength against the invaders for fear of new landings elsewhere.

The Germans recently reported landing attempts at Marsala, on the west coast of Sicily, and the Allies have enough resources in men, ships and supplies to make new thrusts Axis strategists must diagnose the well-masked Allied plans correctly and quickly for successful defense.

Nazis Mass to Stem Drive On Catania

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, (AP)—The largest German troop concentrations yet thrown against the Allied invaders of Sicily were reported today to be massing across the path of British forces now threatening Catania in their northward drive against the key city of Messina.

Augusta, important port about 20 miles south of Catania, fell to Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army yesterday. Additional sea-borne British troops, meanwhile, swarmed ashore near Catania as the main forces of the Eighth army pressed on northward against that second largest city on the island, which lies 55 miles south of Messina.

(The London radio quoted Italian sources as "admitting that allied ships are now in the roadsteads at Catania.")

(The Algiers radio in a broadcast recorded by Reuters said last night that British and Canadian forces already had contacted strong German elements — after the capture of Floridia, interior town eight miles west of Syracuse, and that "heavy fighting took place.")

It was stated officially that Canadian and British troops had met some resistance in their drive inland and up the east coast, but the statement added that "good progress is being made."

Meanwhile, Lieut. General George S. Patton's hard 'hitting American Seventh army tenaciously extended its 60-mile front in southern Sicily reaching from Licata on the west to Ragusa on the east, and continued to pin back German and Italian forces which, by moving eastward, could threaten Montgomery's left flank.

The Americans have repulsed the heaviest repeated enemy counter attacks of the campaign, maintaining the vital left sector of the allied line intact against a series of thrusts by French-made tanks and other armored units.

German and Italian planes continued their sporadic harassment of the Allied armada of 3,000 warships and merchantmen

3,000 Vessels Used To Invade Sicily

By DESMOND TIGHE
(Representing the Combined Allied Press)
(Distributed By INS)

SOMEWHERE IN THE MEDITERRANEAN—(INS)—The "little navy" is playing its part in the Battle of Sicily.

Small ships, meant only for inshore duty, wallowed across thousands of miles of ocean fighting off submarines and air attacks to take part in the invasion of Sicily

Hundreds of them — tank-landing craft, infantry assault boats, motor launches, motor torpedo boats—gathered in the Mediterranean from all parts of the world.

The crugged through the Bay of Biscay from Britain and even crossed the Atlantic from Canada and the United States

(At Allied North African headquarters it was revealed officially that the invasion armada thrown against Sicily totaled more than 3,000 war and non-combatant vessels of all types by far the largest fleet ever assembled in the history of the world.)

Blast 4 Axis Ships, Bag 42 Aircraft

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS North Africa—(UP)—Allied planes sank two more supply ships, damaged two destroyers shot down 42 enemy aircraft and smashed enemy transport and communications in a new series of around-the-clock raids over Sicily and adjacent waters yesterday, a communique announced today.

The attacks on shipping boosted and the number of merchantmen sunk or damaged in 48 hours to seven and the number of Italian destroyers hit to four. A Royal Air Force statement asserted that the concentrated attacks on enemy shipping were frustrating desperate Axis attempts to reinforce its Sicilian garrisons.

Only seven Allied planes were lost in the latest series of attacks, a ratio of 1-6 under enemy losses.

Fighters carried out dawn-to-dusk sweeps over the invasion area, beaches and shipping and drove off enemy aircraft attempting to interfere with the steady progress of ground forces.

Fighter-bombers swept low over the enemy rear, shelling and machine-gunning troop columns, transport and communications. Wrecks of tanks and armored vehicles littered the winding Sicilian roads.

Heavy bombers smashed at the Milo and Catania airdromes and medium bombers dropped their cargoes of explosives on Inna, a communications center.

Torpedo planes caught the two merchant vessels and two destroyers off the north coast of Sicily in the same area where seven enemy vessels were sunk or damaged only 24 hours earlier.

Axis airfields and communications also were attacked by bombers Monday night and intruder planes struck at targets in both Sicily and southern Italy.

Night fighters accounted for 11 of the 42 enemy planes shot down during the 24-hour period.

RAF Blasts Aachen, Yanks Attack France

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of American warplanes, including Flying Fortresses, hammered at targets in Western Europe by daylight today after the RAF had made a heavy night attack on the German Rhineland city of Aachen, center of railway lines linking the Reich with France and the Lowlands.

German airfields in northern France were believed to have been the objective of the daylight raiders, which staged such a spectacular parade across the channel that thousands of persons in British southeast coast towns congregated in the streets to watch them pass.

For nearly an hour the sky was filled with all types of planes, flying at high altitude.

Twenty British planes were reported lost in the night raid on Aachen, which was accompanied by simultaneous assaults on airfields deep in France by swift Mosquito bombers. Beaufighters and Typhoons. German ground defenses and communications also were the targets of harassing aerial attacks.

One German plane was reported shot down over its base in Holland and two more were shot down during the night over Britain.

The German radio acknowledged that a considerable number of buildings had been destroyed in the raid on Aachen and reported a large number of casualties among the civilian population.

The city, which has a normal peacetime population of 164,000, is situated about 39 miles southwest of Cologne. In addition to being a vital railway junction it is the site of important war industries and coal mining developments. The last attack on Aachen was in February, 1942

German raiders struck back sharply early today attacking in waves and dive-bombers a city on the northeast coast of England. At least 12 persons were reported killed and many injured in the city, which was identified by the German radio as Hull Several houses were demolished trapping occupants under the debris, the air ministry announced.

Nazis Prepare For Invasion of Italy

(By United Press)

LONDON German authorities already are preparing for Allied invasion and occupation of Italy, the Daily Telegraph's diplomatic expert said today.

The Daily Telegraph dispatch said news had reached London that pamphlets were being printed at the Hague, Holland, to be scattered over Italy to instruct civilians in resisting an army of occupation.

Madrid dispatches said German units sent into the Sicilian front lines fought only a delaying action, falling back whenever pressed.

Quoting reports from Italy, Madrid said the Fascists had complained the Nazi luftwaffe was not fighting and that German tanks had been held out

Madrid said Gen Alfredo Guzzoni, commanding Italian forces, had appealed urgently to Benito Mussolini for more planes

A Stockholm dispatch said Axis reports of the Sicilian fighting were "surprisingly favorable" for the Allies Besides trying to temper the Nazi people for receiving news of Sicily's fall the propaganda may represent groundwork for an all-out counter-offensive which could be hailed as a major victory even if only partly successfull, Stockholm said.

A Berlin dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter said the Nazi press used an increasingly serious tone in discussing Sicily and that one expert, Heinz Bongartz acknowledged the outcome of the struggle for the island would be "an important advance toward final victory."

Madrid said it was understood the Italian general staff ordered Sicilian garrison commanders to destroy all facilities as they retired or face court martial. The threat, it was said, was made because the British 8th army captured Syracuse practically intact.

The Brazzaville radio said that Germany had tightened precautions in France to meet an expected invasion. Vichy was said to have prohibited entry into the Mediterranean coastal zone, even refusing to allow Marshal Henri Petain, chief of state, to visit his property there.

MOVING IN FOR KILL AT MUNDA

troops and upon anti-aircraft batteries.

Reinforcement or supply of the imperiled garrison by land was rendered virtually impossible by the wily American fighters.

Today's communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur told of the annihilation of 150 Japanese trapped 10 miles northeast of Munda at Enogai inlet.

Another 150 Japanese lost their lives off the coast of Vangunu island to the southeast of Munda but they no longer were defending the air base. They had been ousted from that island by our troops and were trying to escape in barges.

Vila, Munda's supply depot across the Kula gulf on Kolombangara island, took a new pounding from the skies.

In the jungle perimeter of defenses before Munda itself, two strong points were knocked out by our advancing jungle fighters despite stiffening resistance of the enemy.

On northeastern New Guinea, at the other end of the Pacific offensive, Liberators, Flying Fortresses and Mitchells dropped over 50 tons of bombs on Salamaua, the enemy air base toward which our jungle troops are fighting, and 21 tons on nearby Lae.

U. S. Bombs Jap Ships In Haiphong Area

CHUNGKING—(INS)—Heavy bombers of the 14th U. S. Army Air Force pounded the Haiphong-Campha area, scoring direct hits on two Japanese ships and downing an enemy seaplane, it was announced today.

The raid was carried out by four-motored Liberators on Monday.

Neither the type of enemy vessels struck nor the extent of possible American losses were announced.

PICK SITE NEXT TO CITY PORT

CAA Engineers Decide on New Airport Location; Would Reroute Route 13.

survey here yesterday were H. E. Horner, of Chicago, regional CAA supervisor of airports; I. H. Polk, of Chicago, CAA airways engineer, and Herbert H. Howell, of Columbus, district CAA engineer.

The engineers submitted to the city a drawing of the proposed site made early in March which calls for the immediate construction of two 5,600-foot hard-surfaced runways with 1,000-foot sod safety strips at each end along with taxi strips.

Future plans outlined in the drawing call for the ultimate construction of eight runways

The land needed for the site extends about a mile north of Route 13 and south to the boundary of the present port and about a half mile east and west of the highway.

The runways to be constructed run from northwest to southeast and from northeast to southwest.

Parts of two county roads, one paralleling the present port and another mile farther north would have to be abandoned, the engineers said.

No estimate was made of the number of properties involved.

TAXIS MUST GO 'STRAIGHT'

CHICAGO —(UP)— Pleasure driving of the kind that pleases the taxi driver at the expense of his passenger is illegal under an ordinance just passed by the city council of Walla Walla Wash., the American Municipal association reports. The law forbids drivers to take passengers "the long way," under penalty of a $100 fine

They did not reveal when and where they were married and said they had hoped to prolong the secret. Dolgin formerly was a musician.

City Employes Get Council Promise Of Pay Hike Study

month pay boost for all city workers.

Among them was Capt. Frank Stahl, of the fire department, who told council that both departments were experiencing a great deal of difficulty in keeping younger men on the job with industry offering a more attractive field for pay.

Citing figures, Capt. Stahl said: "Our expenses have increased tremendously. Our income will not meet these expenses."

He quoted figures showing that firemen in a score of other Ohio cities of comparable size were receiving higher wages than Mansfield firemen.

"We feel that we should come in with the tide because we know that we'll go out with it. Detective Lee J. Remy, speaking for the policemen said. "We don't want to wind up in debt when this is all over."

Rudy Schneider, AFL representative, and John Gross, CIO representative, urged council to increase starting rates for police and firemen, and that all employes be increased in line with the cost of living.

The request for an increase, city officials said, was the third to be received from employes in the past 18 months. They have been granted raises averaging $60 per employe per year.

Council also approved an ordinance providing for the issuance of $36,250 in bonds to finance the property owners share of the cost of improvements made during the past 18 months on eight city streets.

Issued in anticipation of the collection of assessments, the bonds will cover the cost of improving Arlington avenue, Bartley avenue, East First street, Glenbeck lane, Glessner avenue, Park avenue east, East Raleigh avenue, and Taylor road.

Purchase of new radio transmitter and mobile equipment for the police department was assured when council set up a fund of $4,600 to meet the cost of the new equipment.

A sum of $4,000 was appropriated for drilling an additional water well in the Maxwell Springs area.

First reading was given an ordinance that makes it mandatory that taxicabs and buses post within each vehicle a schedule of rates and a map of zones.

REMARKS SANELY

GLADEWATER, Tex. — (UP) — Donald E. Covin, 36-year-old convicted murderer whose legal insanity kept him out of the Texas electric chair, was recently adjudged sane and his sentence commuted to life imprisonment Covin's only comment: "Sure is good to be sane again."

SETS UP CITY PAY MAXIMUMS

War Labor Board Establishes Rates; Truck Driver Wage Affects 200 Here.

still must approve increases all the way up to maximum. It said also that it may refuse maximum rates if a sizeable wage jump is involved. The schedule does not affect wages already higher than the maximums.

Other wage maximums set for the nine different occupational classifications will result in little if any change here, union leaders said. In most cases prevailing rates are higher than the maximums

The WLB maximums together with the average prevailing rates in the eight other classifications are as follows:

Common labor 65 cents, prevailing 82½ cents; spot welders 75 cents, prevailing 85-90 cents; radial drill press operators 87½ cents, prevailing 90 cents to $1; maintenance carpenters 90 cents, prevailing $1.25, milling machine operators 95 cents, prevailing 95 cents; turret lathe operators $1, prevailing 95; millwrights, maintenance electricians and maintenance machinists $1.05, prevailing $1.25; tool and die makers, $1.20, prevailing $1.33.

Lewis M. Gill, regional WLB chairman, said the scales do not affect workers already receiving higher pay, while employers paying less than the maximum are not compelled to raise wages.

The board said it could approve rates above the maximums only in "rare and unusual" cases or those granted in accordance with the Little Steel formula.

Employers wishing to pay graduated scales, the board asserted, may seek increases under a range-of-rates formula instead of flat maximums. The midpoint of such ranges must be the single rate, thus in a case where the single rate was 60 cents the range would be from 55 to 65 cents

Replying to criticisms that common labor rates set for some cities were too low and that scales in most plants already were above WLB rates, thus precluding further raises except under the Little Steel formula, Gill said in a statement that the maximums had been set "deliberately" at a level 10 per cent below the average paid in an area.

This is in line, he asserted, with a national wage stabilization policy which says " you are not suffering from a gross inequity if your wages are within 10 per cent of the average being paid in your area for your particular type of job."

Rates set for Mansfield also apply to Columbus, Alliance, Ashland, Elyria, Fostoria, Hamilton, Ironton, Middletown, Newark, Sandusky and Sidney.

the central front brought the official Russian totals to 2,772 tanks and 1,187 planes for the nine-day period.

(Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, warned Russian workers in a broadcast recorded by U. S. Monitors that the Germans still have a "considerable number of planes, which are being thrown into the battle" and urged redoubled efforts in plane production.)

Use Caterpillar Guns Against Reds

MOSCOW — (AP) — The Germans have thrown hundreds of new type giant caterpillar guns into fighting on the Russian front, Soviet front-line dispatches said today.

The guns, which Russian troops have nicknamed "Ferdinands," are protected in front by an armor plate approximately 8 inches thick and by side plates approximately 5 inches thick, the dispatches said.

HARTFORD, Conn. —(UP)— A woman gave police a careful description of the man she said dragged her down two flights of stairs by her hair, choked her and threatened to kill her.

"Don't worry, lady," the desk sergeant comforted her. "We'll arrest him in no time at all." She protested "But I don't want him arrested. "Just find him for me. He promised to marry me."

CITY STIRRED BY YOUTH PLEA

Junior Chamber, Ministers and PTA Indicate Action For Recreation Center.

reation center by Rev. Albert Lindner today.

"Small scale plans can be and have been worked out by the various churches but the ministers of Mansfield feel that a recreation center which serves the whole community and is non-sectarian is the real answer to the problem. The ones we want to reach through a project of this kind are not the ones in the church," the minister said.

He noted that in these boom days when even 14 and 15-year-olds are earning money they should have a place to spend it legitimately where they can enjoy themselves. One of the boys arraigned in juvenile court, 16 years of age, testified that he is earning $30 a week.

PTA officials also indicated their interest in some sort of project to keep the young people off the streets and give them entertainment to fit their needs.

Centers of this sort have been established all over the country as citizens felt the need for them as a measure to keep young people out of taverns and roadhouses.

In Ashland the Junior Chamber of Commerce more than a year ago gave the initial backing to a recreation center where youngsters may go to dance any night in the week with the exception of Sunday night. They are chaperoned by members of the organization and "cokes" are on sale at the "bar."

Each youngster buys a membership card for the year and is admitted free any night or pays 10 cents each night he attends the center. Music is furnished free and there are games for those who do not dance.

RAGS SET FIRE

LIMA —(INS)— The Lima city building was damaged to the extent of $8,000 by a fire last night in a storeroom, Fire Chief Harry Taflinger estimated today

The blaze is believed to have started in oily rags in the unoccupied room. For a time, it threatened to spread to the council chamber but firemen succeeded in confining it to the storeroom.

CHAPTER XXIV

"How're you feeling, Dave?"

"Oh, I had a good enough night. But tell me, Joe—how're Parker and O'Reilly?"

"O'Reilly's okay. But Johnny," Mr. Rossi's lip trembled, "Johnny—shoved off—about ten minutes ago." He wiped his eyes on the back of his hand "Just before he died, he—he asked me to post his for him."

Elder blinked through his tears at the blood-stained envelope. "Miss Mary Pollard, Route 3, Glorietta, Cherokee County, Kansas, U. S A" He read the address as though he were reading the burial service.

Mr. Rossi rose, shoved his hands into his pockets and stood at the porthole, gazing out upon the bleak wave-pounded granite cliffs and gloomy fir forests of the Murman coast. For a long time the pair was silent. Then Elder cleared his throat. "Well'" he said huskily, "Well!"

"Well, Dave—I guess that's that!" said Mr Rossi

"How many prisoners have we got?"

"Eighteen, counting the one whose jaw I broke. It seems a Russian destroyer sunk his sub five or six hours before we came along and was damned fool enough to drop him that life raft. Well, while I was at it, I wish to God I'd killed him!"

"Yes, Joe, I wish you had How come you killed the other one?"

"Oh, him! Well, I had him cornered and he had his hands up, hollering 'Kamerad!' But as soon as I came near him to put the irons on, he brought one hand down, ker-swack, and—well, he had a sandbag in it!" Mr. Rossi felt his left shoulder gingerly.

"A sandbag?"

"Yair—made out of a woolen sock It must have been what he used to slug Sparks with, before they chucked him overboard and sent off their message. He got the sand out of a fire bucket. O'Reilly says there was at least a handful of it in the barrel of each of the machine guns, too"

"Gosh! No wonder they blew up'"

"Yes—and the way that sight on the after gun was bent, it was no wonder O'Reilly kept missing the sub"

"Well, by gosh, it was pretty smart of 'em, Joe! Smart, the German way"

'What do you mean, smart the German way

'Why, I mean that the Germans are always smart enough to think up ways of causing trouble, but they're never quite smart enough to get anything out of it That's why they don't win wars'"

Outside naval headquarters, on Murmansk's Square of the Revolution, a great crowd was gathered In the center of this crowd, within a hollow square of Russian and American bluejackets and marines, Vice Admiral Igor Stolypin commander-in-chief of the Northern Red Fleet, was conferring the Order of Afansy Matushenko the Sailor upon Captain David Elder The admiral was eloquent, but because his English was peculiar, a considerable portion of his audience, including Elder, had only the sketchiest notion of what he was talking about

'Jeeze!" said little Smitty, standing on tiptoe and viewing the proceedings between the shoulders of two stalwart Russian girls 'Look at the Old Man blush! I bet there's plenty of places he'd rather be than here!"

'Him and me both'" said handsome Stan Stanislawski, whose attention had been straying "For instance, just get a load of them two blond chickadees standing right in front of you, Smitty! Looka the eyes on 'em! Looka the shapes on 'em! Oh, boy, oh boy If I could only talk Russian I'd . . ."

One of the ladies wheeled upon him, 'Oh, ya would, wouldja? Well, you louse, take THAT!"

Stanislawski retreated in poor order his hand pressed to his smarting cheek Glancing fearfully behind him, he saw that Smitty had moved in between the damsels and had an arm around the waist of each of them The trio were chatting and laughing gaily.

Admiral Stolypin wound up his discourse in a whirlwind of oratory and pinned the medal on Elder's breast Then, embracing him carefully, so as not to hurt his wounded shoulder he planted a whiskery kiss on either cheek There was a fanfare of bugles and a rattle of rifles as the guard presented arms

Then Admiral William Lacey U S N stepped forward and saluted Elder "Captain," he said 'in congratulating you upon the high honor just bestowed by the Soviet government I am privileged to inform you that your own government as well has taken cognizance of the heroic and invaluable services which you have rendered The full story of your gallantry was contained in the official report of Ensign O'Reilly, of your gun crew, which was transmitted to Washington and given careful study. As a result, in behalf of the Congress of the United States of America, and by its direction, I now present you the nation's highest award—the Congressional Medal of Honor."

With the band playing and the American and Russian naval staffs lined up behind him, Elder stood in a daze as the guard marched past him at salute He was still in a daze as a naval lieutenant rushed up to him, grasped his good hand and cried

"Congratulations, Pop!"

"Hunh? Howard! Howard! Why, hello there, Howard! How are you, boy?'

"Fine, Pop! I . . .

"M'mph! Now, now, don't call me Pop!"

"All right then—GRANDPOP!"

"Hunh? What's that—You—you mean Adelaide's going to have a? . . ."

"Yop! Got a letter on the plane that came in this morning!"

'Well, I'll be . . .!'

"Say, Pop—if it's a boy, what'll we do with him? Put him in the Navy or in the Merchant Marine?"

'Hm!" Elder stroked his chin thoughtfully 'Gosh, Howard" he said 'Won't it be great if he's—twins?"

KENNEY AIDE IN TOUGH JOB

Knows By Serial Number the Location of All Planes In Pacific Area.

(By International News Service)

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA —In the opinion of every army air corps officer in the southwest Pacific area, Captain Howard Marshall of Atlantic, Iowa, and Bronxville, N Y has the most unpleasant and the least envied task in the Allied Air Forces

He must know, by serial number, the whereabout sof every tactical airplane in Lieut.-Gen George Kennedy's Fifth Air Force every hour of every day

Marshall must know the exact number of planes in the depot—again by serial number. He has to have the location in mind of every fighter in New Guinea—and be able to give its exact location whenever Kenney might need it

The job, Marshall insists, is not accomplished by mirrors—and to prove it he points to a massive collection of charts detailing on an hourly basis the knowledge he must have

Literally thousands of messages from operations officers of individual units pour into Marshall's office during a day, all adding their bit to the final coordinated picture which Kennedy sees

Involved as his task may sound its importance cannot be overmagnified For by the intricate system employed, Kennedy is able to "keep his finger" on his complete strength—and if a crisis should develop, he knows down to the last P39 the exact striking force he can assemble within a specific period

Marshall's two assistants are, strangely enough, both from Dallas Texas and practically next-door neighbors Captain Frank Dean is in charge of the operational side, while Lieutenant George Hunter handles the non-tactical aircraft

The 27-year-old Marshall is frankly not overly enthused about his job—and for good reason

"No one will even sleep with me in the same tent anymore," he explains disconsolately, "because they say I keep anyone within a half-mile awake all night reciting serial numbers in my sleep."

SHIPYARD WORKERS GIVE EXTRA TIME FOR FIGHTERS OVERSEAS

(By United Press)

NEW ORLEANS, La — Maybe his will make them feel better—hose kids in foxholes They must et a little sick of reading about trikes and the black market.

The welders and carpenters at Higgins' swift roaring shipyards ave formed a club—a club that s oing to mean something, eventully, to every uniformed man overeas

Once a week, about 2 000 men nd women at Higgins punch an xtra half hour on their time heet To make overtime pay? 'hey'd smack anybody who hunt-d at it

That half hour is the membership fee of the 'Half Hour club' club which includes two-thirds of the Higgins staff, and is rolling fast toward a hundred per cent

It started a few weeks ago with a couple of men and an idea An army big shot had spoken to the men about what was happening over there

They listened

The next day they suggested to their fighting Irish boss that lunch time be cut Forty-five minutes was enough they said That extra quarter hour might mean an extra boat in a week or so

Then they decided to work 30 minutes later each week They draw their pay check all right—long enough to sign it Then it goes into the club treasury and from there overseas Last week's dues went into 3000 cartons of smokes Not GI stuff but favorite brands bought directly from the manufacturer

As the treasury builds, as more men and women join the worker-sponsored voluntary group funds will be split among the various war agencies Each week some agency will be given the week's income, with Red Cross, British War Relief and the rest sharing in rotation.

Higgins is one of the biggest shipyards in the country, but even 5 600 workers can't make a very big splash in a 10,000 000-man armed force

Those that don t receive money benefits, however, still get something from those workers at Higgins' They get the glow that comes with knowing they aren't forgotten back home

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1943.

At present prices the cantaloupe gamble becomes more costly than usual.

"Live dangerously," Mussolini advised the Italian people several years ago, and the Allies are now helping him put over the idea.

"Back the Attack With War Bonds," is the new slogan—and this means that there should be no letup in regular purchase of bonds and stamps.

Greater Farm Production Urged

MORE than a directive from Washington will be needed to accomplish the 1944 food production feat demanded by War Food Administrator Marvin Jones.

With farmers hard-pressed to find sufficient help to take care of present limited acreage, Mr. Jones is calling for planned cultivation of 16,000,000 additional acres next year—by use of "crop land which has been idle during recent years."

When it is recalled that it was the New Deal philosophy of scarcity that accounts for these millions of acres of crop land that have been "idle in recent years," and that farmers were paid out of taxpayers' money to NOT produce foodstuffs on these rich acres, the present situation would appear ridiculous, were it not so serious.

It is better, perhaps, that some one other than Henry A. Wallace is in charge of the program of inspiring farmers to increase production to the limit next year, as the shift from paying them NOT TO FARM to paying them to "put every crop acre and every farming facility to the most productive use" would have been rather awkward.

Announcement that considerably more machinery and larger supplies of fertilizer will be available NEXT year indicates that this year's experience may be made beneficial within another year and that, if enough time can be given, some of the mistakes in distribution of essential farm equipment will be corrected.

Meanwhile, however, it is THIS year's farm production that must be depended upon for food supplies for the armed forces, the civilian population and lend-lease requirements, and predictions of presumably competent observers agree that the civilian food outlook for the final months of 1943 are not bright.

Why Children 'Bum Around Town'

A STARTING POINT for study of what is being rather inaccurately called Mansfield's "juvenile delinquency problem" is seen in the remark of a 15-year-old boy who was in juvenile court on a charge of intoxication and disorderly conduct.

"I go to a show two or three nights a week," he said, "and the rest of the time just bum around town. What else is there to do here?"

That's right, come to think of it, "what else is there to do here." for lively youngsters in the 12 to 18 age range who are left to shift for themselves, sometimes without even mild parental restraint.

It's easy enough for adults to arbitrarily conclude that children of early teen age "should be at home in bed" long before midnight, but with midsummer daylight extending well toward 10 p. m., this idea offers no practical solution to the problem.

Nor does a program designed to keep children at home every night in the week serve the purpose in more than a few instances.

Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., Friendly House, and other children's and youths' organizations serve well in their respective fields but none has sufficient scope to make the community-wide appeal to juvenile interest that seems to be needed.

Distribution of church and school properties in convenient locations throughout the city seem to offer logical centers for augmented youth activities but problems of restrictions and supervision have thus far been unsolved.

Some other Ohio cities have gone further than Mansfield in providing their children with "someplace to go," other than night clubs and beer joints. Possibly something can be done about it here if enough people become seriously interested—and if the state liquor board will co-operate by permanently revoking the licenses of those liquor and beer vendors who have no scruples against making drunkards of Mansfield's children.

Congress As An Institution

AS CONGRESS goes home for a rest, it may be a good time to do a little honest thinking about that institution. Americans are mostly inclined to abuse congressmen and give congress as a whole scant praise for its merits.

But Senator Robert La Follette, writing in the July Atlantic Monthly, insists that there is a big difference between "running down" individual congressmen and running down congress as an institution. He indignantly condemns an assumption that "the ignorance and provincialism of congress render it incapable of meeting the needs of modern government."

> "It is always easy," says Mr. La Follette, "to attribute the shortcomings of congress to the fact it no longer has men of the caliber of Clay, Calhoun and Webster among its members. But even when those eminent statesmen were alive, Alexis de Tocqueville, writing on his visit to the United States, complained that 'the race of American statesmen has evidently dwindled most remarkably in the course of the last 50 years.'"

The present ability of congress is probably underestimated. This comes partly from the growing custom of senators and representatives to conduct themselves as business men in charge of governmental affairs, rather than orators. But Mr. La Follette quotes Charles A. Beard, a learned and trenchant writer, as saying that while the Congressional Record contains a lot of "tripe," it also contains many addresses which, "for breadth of knowledge, technical skill, analytical acumen, close reasoning and dignified presentation, compare favorably with similar utterances made in the preceding century by the so-called great orators."

Henry Wallace is probably a kind hearted fellow, and there's no likelihood that his early idea of paying farmers NOT to farm was intended to introduce a planned famine program.

The more American life changes, the more it remains the same. Boys are still running away from home to "join the circus."

One pleasant butcher thinks ring bologna will be easiest to roll back.

ALMOST EVERYTHING'S TURNING OUT WELL

Allied Output of War Materials Far Exceeds Production By Axis

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

WAR PRODUCTION CHIEF Donald Nelson's "voice of doom" speech, hurled at the Axis from Toronto just before the Allied invasion of Sicily, answers by indirection a troublesome question which a reader of this column has submitted, namely, what concrete evidence have we to substantiate claims that the German-Italian combine is short of resources and is on the down grade in production.

Well, there's much satisfactory evidence that the Axis is on the skids. I should say that more than a little support for this is to be seen in the United Nations' triumph in Tunisia and the present manner in which they have invaded Sicily—one of Mussolini's main strongholds.

We also have substantiation from Allied secret agents, from captured documents, from admissions by prisoners of war, from shrewd calculations by Allied experts. However, if you demand precise figures to show the decline, it must be admitted that it isn't easy to find them.

Now along comes Mr. Nelson and shows us in a few graphic words that it doesn't matter how much the Axis is producing because the United Nations are doing so much more. We can smother the enemy at their best.

That's a cogent reminder of the basic fact that this is a war of resources and transportation—as witness the invasion of Sicily. The Allies have many times the resources of the Axis. Therefore the Allies must win.

Chairman Nelson says that the North American continent alone will outproduce the Axis in munitions this year by nearly two to one. All the United Nations will make three times the Axis output of arms, and next year four times.

"These figures speak to the world in a big voice," he declares "and if the Nazi and Jap warlords are not completely insane, they will recognize that the voice is the voice of doom."

But Mr. Nelson doesn't let this blind him to the "serious effects of the spasmodic strikes and riots on the war production program" in this country. He warns that "the times call for a cooperative war production effort of increasing pace and magnitude, matching the military effort."

WHILE Nelson was speaking in Toronto, I heard the "voice of doom" thesis, and the magnitude of our task, developed here in New York at a private preview of the Walt Disney productions' picturization of Major Alexander P. De Seversky's book "Victory Through Air Power." The famous airman-inventor himself appears on the screen and at one point in discussing our war effort says dramatically:

"With our abundant resources, wealth of manpower, and tremendous industrial capacity—why, we can build the biggest army, the biggest navy, and the biggest air force—and with this super-colossal team we'll smother the enemy with the sheer weight of our men and machines!

"The success of this procedure depends on two things. First we must produce a vast amount of weapons of endless variety——and second, we must deliver this maze of equipment to battlefronts that are spread all over the face of the earth.

"Already nearly one hundred million tons of vital supplies are required every month — month after month—and if we step up the offensive, this tonnage will grow."

Seversky shows the all-important part the air plays in maintaining Allied communications, and in reaching out across the borders of enemy countries and smashing their production centers, supply bases and lines of communications. That brings us back to Mr. Nelson, for he said:

"We have every reason to believe that in Italy and Germany the wholesale destruction of plants from the air is reducing munitions output well below recent peak levels."

And then in making a plea for greater production, Nelson prophesied:

"You will shortly see gigantic battles in which unheard of war materials will be consumed."

In the comparatively short time since that prediction was made the first of these great battles has got under way. The test is begun.

Dave Boone Says:

HENRY MORGENTHAU is much concerned over an effective slogan for the new war bond drive, but it seems to me that no slogan would sell as many bonds as those striking pictures of American boys in our paratroop corps leaping from planes over Sicily.

There is something in the faces and attitudes of these lads as they are about to bail out in the black night that stirs the heart. High resolve, deadly seriousness and a grimness of determination such as we at home can hardly imagine are written in the expressions of these brave kids. One lad's head is in his arms, maybe in prayer.

Here are American boys who were born and raised in a peace-loving land, hating nobody and abhorring violence. All they ever expected to do was to live their own lives on the farm, the ranch, in the office or the factory. And now they are tough paratroopers, loaded down with Tommy guns, daggers and grenades, jumping out of the clouds on a job to challenge the courage of the stoutest-hearted.

* * *

There's one lad in these pictures of paratroopers whose likeness should be on every war bond poster. No artist could get into a facial expression what the camera has done. It ought to be on every war bond.

Daily Bible Thought

Happy is the man that findeth wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding. For the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold.—Proverbs 3:13-14.

Timely Editorial

The Newspapers Kept Faith.

One of the significant stories connected with the invasion of Sicily was the account of the secret protected by more than 100 American and British newspapermen. General Eisenhower evidently believed the correspondents could report day by day happenings more intelligently to the people at home if they were told of the invasion plans. So nearly a month in advance he told them approximately when the invasion would come, and where it would hit.

If the general had not had implicit confidence in the integrity of the press he would not have taken the chance. He knew that his confidence never had been betrayed and that it would not be betrayed. His attitude was justified by events. There was no leak. His action was as spectacular an indorsement of the patriotic loyalty of the newspaper profession as ever has been given.—Kansas City Times.

TODAY IN HISTORY

A world wide cause celebre had its beginning with the conviction, on this date in 1921, of Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti on the charge of murder. They were finally executed by the State of Massachusetts six years later.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

BOY MEETS GIRL

I SAW a pretty girl—14 perhaps, but tall—come down the street toward the village drug store. She was lithe and dark with loosely flying curls held back at the nape of the neck with a flowered clasp. Her face had a brown sun tan—her arms and girlish hands were just as brown. Her chin was up and her large hazel eyes were bright with expectancy.

What to her was war across the seas? Unmarred by any troubling blight or fear she set her feet down blithely, in their Girl Scout saddles—an American rural girl, unescorted and unafraid, going down to get a coke. (Every village has a "best" place to get a coke).

A tall blond boy stood just inside the door of the business place. He blushed beneath his harvest sunburn, when he saw her coming, and moved to put a broad hand upon the upper crosspiece of the screen door frame.

She tried to open the door, and her eyes touched his, so that he smiled delightedly. It was a strong, consuming smile such as only youth can naturally possess — a strange awakening, vaguely felt—a living, growing urge, unsatisfied.

"Hi, Bob," she said. "What's cookin'? Let me in."

He stood on one large foot and then the other and looked at her some more before he moved the screen door outward slightly. When she would enter, he put one strong finger on her sleeveless arm and said, "No, no! You don't want to come in here . . . do you?"

She brushed away his hand with an almost imperceptible tremor of pride and wonder at his manly recognition. She brushed against his loose sport shirt in passing and said "Moron! You'll let in all the flies!"

YOUTHFUL romance—perennial human need. Fortunate those parents who share young confidences.

That moment at the village drugstore will be relived by boy and girl many times in the silence of their own rooms, before the week has passed. Can a mother grow so old that she forgets some sweet tender moment of her own girlhood? Can a man become so lacking in fine sensibilities that he will not admire, defend and deeply enjoy his son's first shy love interest in a wholesome girl?

The petals open and the flower looks upward through its fringes to the far blue stretches of the sky.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Wealthy Chicago Group Initiated The Gillette Stop-Roosevelt Move

WASHINGTON—During his 17 years in congress, veteran Representative Jed Johnson of Oklahoma has made a practice of calling on the incumbent president at the end of each session for a chat on legislative matters. A significant thing about these visits is that Johnson usually found the chief executive in an unhappy mood about congress.

Coolidge always was glum and critical. He said he got no cooperation from the legislators. And when Johnson called on Hoover in early 1933, after his defeat, Hoover unleashed a rippling tirade to the effect that congress was responsible for all the economic evils of that period.

President Roosevelt didn't entirely upset this tradition when Johnson visited him the day the 78th congress recessed for the summer. Roosevelt also was irked about congress' wishy-washy attitude on inflation. However, Roosevelt was more philosophical than belligerent.

The president said that too many congressmen were concerned about the prosperity of their own districts, instead of looking at the whole picture. This was true of both the farm and labor blocs in congress, the president said, although the farm bloc was more strongly entrenched.

If pressure groups had their way, he added, we would have a repetition of conditions during the last war when corn rocketed to $1.44 a bushel and cotton sold for 40 cents a pound.

Should the administration make a price concession on one commodity, the president remarked, there would be a stampede of demands for boosting price ceilings on all other commodities. This stampede would be difficult, if not impossible, to stop.

"It's the old story about the camel getting his nose under the tent, Jed," said the president. "Once he does it, the chances are he's going all the way in."

Note: The current price ceiling on corn is $1.07 a bushel while cotton is selling for about 18 cents a pound.

Gillette Boom Grows.

THERE is more than meets the eye behind the backstage grooming of Senator Guy Gillette of Iowa to be president of the United States.

Despite the denials, Jim Farley let part of the cat out of the bag when he called an ultra secret luncheon of anti-Roosevelt senators in the Capitol the other day to push Gillette's nomination.

But there is a lot more than Jim Farley behind the plan. Real fact is that Gillette's candidacy was first inspired and privately pushed by a group of wealthy Chicago businessmen who sponsored the America First Committee.

Jim Farley wasn't in on the ground floor with Gillette at first. He leaned toward Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia as the ideal Democrat to pick up Republican votes and defeat Roosevelt. However, when he saw the Chicago support and money for Gillette he was glad to go along.

The big money boys in Chicago who are pushing Gillette argue that food will be a tremendous political issue in the 1944 campaign, so a midwesterner would be a better candidate.

They also point out that Gillette is on the senate agricultural committee where he has done a good job, and unquestionably showed the administration some real pointers on synthetic rubber.

Also the fact that Byrd is the biggest apple grower in the world, and has followed a wage scale which endears him neither to farmers nor labor, would not help his candidacy in the crucial midwest.

Strategy of the Chicago backstage boys is that the only man who can defeat Roosevelt for a fourth term is a Democrat who must win the Solid South and also win Republican votes. They believe Gillette can do both.

Their plan is to nominate him on the Democratic ticket, then urge the Republicans to nominate him also.

Note: This may be good strategy on paper, but whoever heard of the Republican party nominating a Democrat when they could smell victory themselves. That's one reason the boys don't even warm up to Willkie.

Who Bore Ruml Baby?

BIGGEST chuckle Capitol Hill enjoyed just before the recess was over the efforts of Republican leaders to disavow complete parentage of the Ruml pay-as-you-go income tax program. They wanted it clearly understood that Democrats helped produce the baby.

A few months ago, astute, popular Representative Joe Martin of Massachusetts, House GOP leader, was all-out for the Ruml plan. However, now that it has become law and the cold facts about tax forgiveness for big incomes have sunk home, Martin and his lieutenants have not been so enthusiastic.

Representative Wright Patman of Texas smoked his GOP colleagues out on this delicate subject a few days before the recess, declaring: "There is one bill that passed the congress a while back that is strictly, solely and purely a Republican bill—the tax bill. The Republicans wrote that bill and I am willing to give them the credit."

"The gentleman knows that is not a correct statement," countered Martin.

"I am sure the gentleman would now like to put the monkey on somebody else's back," shot back Patman.

"One part of the tax bill that the people will object to rather strenuously is the proposal by the treasury department — the withholding part of the bill," insisted Martin. "That was supported by Democrats."

"You had to have the withholding tax to pay what you were forgiving the war millionaires," rejoined Patman smoothly. "Under the bill we forgave the millionaires seven or eight billion dollars, and you had to put over the 20 per cent withholding tax in order to pay that."

Representative Bertrand Gearhart of California, the only Republican member of the ways and means committee who fought the Ruml plan, remarked to a friend on the GOP side of the aisle: "It looks like the chickens are coming home to roost."

Rationing Merry-Go-Round.

CHAIRMAN of the Consumer Price Committee on the Ridgefield, Conn., rationing board is Geraldine Farrar, famous opera singer. . . . In Maiden, Mass., a young woman telephoned the ration board chairman and said, "My boy-friend and I plan to be married in the fall, and what I want to know is how we can keep warm in our new apartment." . . . As a long line formed in the offices of the Belmont, Mass., rationing board, a good-natured citizen asked if there was any place where he could plug in his electric razor, to shave himself while waiting. . . . Three retired millionaires run the rationing board in Newport, R. I., paying the rent for the board's headquarters, and working from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. They report that John Q. Public gives them no trouble, but "most of the headaches are caused by arrogant wives of navy officers."

Rudolph Halley, counsel for the special senate committee to investigate gasoline and fuel-oil, wrote a hot report recommending that OPA be shorn of power over rationing. Interesting fact: Last winter, Halley, had his fuel oil ration cut so sharply that he was forced to convert to coal.

Getting Ready for the Invasion Shifts Ernie From Army to Navy.

ABOARD A U. S. NAVY SHIP OF THE INVASION FLEET—(By Wireless—(Delayed)—When our military and naval forces began fitting the war correspondents into the great invasion patchwork some weeks ago, most of us were given the choice of what type of assignment we wanted—assault forces, invasion fleet, African Base Headquarters, and what not.

Since I had never had the opportunity in Africa to serve with the navy I chose the invasion fleet. My request was approved. From then on it was simply a question of waiting for the call. Correspondents were dribbled out of sight a few at a time in order not to give a tipoff to the enemy by sudden mass exodus.

We'd been given a general fill-in on the invasion plans under the most grim warnings against repeating what we knew or even talking about it among ourselves. Some of the correspondents disappeared on their assignments as much as three weeks before the invasion while others didn't get the call until the last minute.

I was somewhat surreptitiously whisked away by air about 10 days ahead of time. We weren't of course permitted to cable our offices where we were going or even that we were going at all. Our bosses, I hope, had the good sense to assume we were just loafing on the job rather than being dead or kidnaped by Arabs.

After a long plane ride and a couple of dusty rides in Jeeps I arrived in a port city I'd known before the war. When I reported to Naval Headquarters I found I was expected and was assigned to a ship. It was lying at anchor out in the harbor—one of many scores—and they said I could go aboard right away.

I've lived with the army in the field so long I actually feel like a soldier yet it was wonderful to get with the navy for a change and let yourself sink into the blessedness of a world that is orderly and civilized by comparison with the animal-like existence of living in the field.

OUR VESSEL was neither a troopship nor a warship but it was a mighty important ship. It was not huge, just big enough so you could feel self-respecting about our part in the invasion. Yet it was small enough to be intimate and I got to be part of the ship's family by the time we actually set sail.

I was thankful because it gave me time to get acquainted and get the feel of warfare at sea. We did carry some troops. The first few hours every soldier spent on board was exactly the same—first of all they took a wonderful shower bath, then drank water with ice in it, then sat at a table and ate food with real silverware, then arranged their personal gear along the walls, then drank coffee, sat in real chairs, read recent magazines, saw a movie after supper, then into bed with a real mattress.

It was too much for most of us and we all kept blubbering our appreciation until finally I'm sure the navy must have become sick of our juvenile delights over things that used to be common to all men and, oh yes, I forgot we have ice cream and soft drinks aboard, also. That is nothing short of miraculous.

WE WEREN'T told what day we were to sail but it was obvious it wasn't going to be immediately for there was still too much going and coming, too much hustle and bustle about the port. Our ship, of course, was blacked-out while in port but wasn't observed as strictly as our convoy blackouts from England last fall.

For one thing the activity of invasion prepartion was so seething those last few weeks that in practically every port in North Africa the harbor lights blazed throughout the night, contemptuous of danger. There simply wasn't time to be cautious. The ship loading had to go on day and night so they let the harbor lights burn.

The bunk assigned to me was in one of the big lower bunkrooms but it was terrifically hot down there so the captain of the ship—a serious, thoughtful veteran naval aviator—had a cot put up for me on deck with a mattress on it and there I slept with the soft fresh breezes of the Mediterranean night wafting over me. Mine was the best spot on the ship, even better than the captain's.

In slight compensation for this lavish hospitality I agreed to lend a professional touch to the ship's daily mimeographed newspaper by editing and arranging the news dispatches our wireless picked up from all over the world during the night.

This little chore involved getting up at 3 a. m., working about two hours, then sitting around chinning and drinking coffee with the radio operators until too late to go back to sleep so as a sailor I haven't had much rest but, as we say in the newspaper business, you meet a lot of interesting radio operators.

HENRY STREET NURSES REDUCE ABSENTEEISM

They Care For Wives and Families of War Workers.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Cutting down absenteeism in defense industries by caring for the sick members of war workers' families is the latest accomplishment in the list of the multitudinous activities of the Henry Street Settlement.

The Settlement, known from coast to coast for the work of its corps of trim visiting nurses, who now tour the city on bicycles with their satchels perched on the handle-bars, recently celebrated its 50th anniversary.

Operating with a reduced staff of 265, rather than the usual 300 nurses, the organization nevertheless expects to maintain its usual quota of 500,000 visits a year to 100,000 homes in Greater New York.

Many of these calls are made in homes of defense workers, according to Miss Katharine Faville, director of the Visiting Nurse service.

"We like the praise we've been getting lately for cutting down absenteeism," she said. "It's nothing unusual for a nurse to land in a flat where the husband is home taking care of the wife and baby."

Recently, according to Miss Faville, one of these wives was so critically ill that the Settlement arranged immediately for a visiting housekeeper to look after the home and free the man's time and his mind for vital defense duties.

An expanding war service is the defense training which Miss Faville's department gives to nurses from other cities.

"We'll have a new class of 600 in June," she explained, "including graduate nurses and some in their senior year who get practice caring for people in congested districts.

"From here they go to crowded areas, wherever the home groups send them, perhaps to Bridgeport or California, perhaps to work in a plant, perhaps to take care of wives who leave home so that when the baby is born they will be near the husband, who is in training camp or in a war industry.

"Local authorities don't have facilities to cope with these people. Our nurses consider that it is an essential war service to teach outsiders. We also emphasize the importance of getting and keeping well. Settlement nutritionists help with that."

The Settlement has other branches just as important and constructive as the Visiting Nurse Service, it was pointed out.

There's a music school, for instance, from which celebrated musicians have come, and a theater where many Broadway stars first learned to walk the boards. One department trains boys and girls for farm work, while another gives Americanization instruction, and still another operates the new barter center known as the "Swap Shop." In addition, clubs, classes and parties are organized for men, women and children.

DROPS HORSEY FOR COLLINS

LOS ANGELES, Cal. —(UP)— Charles P. Horsey, 17, told the superior court here that the name was too much for him. The court agreed and changed it to Collins. Innocent kibitizers suggested that while he was at it, it might add glamor to his name to have his first name changed to Tom, but he ignored the suggestion.

NO GRATITUDE

SAN DIEGO, Cal. —(UP)— A pet hen belonging to Shirley Hendriksen, 12, played a mean trick on a pair of pigeons here. It laid an egg in the nest of the pigeons. While the latter appeared a trifle consternated at the size of the egg, they nevertheless took turns sitting dutifully and diligently on the egg for three weeks, when out came a chicken that ungratefully did not regard them as being its parents.

Teach Child To Respect Books, Toys

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Little children beginning to use crayons may use them in the wrong places, as on the wall or in a book. Or the tot may run a metal toy over polished furniture, deliberately scratching the surface.

This won't happen if the child has been amply supervised when in the early stages at using such playthings and tools.

When your child is shown a lovely book, be with him. Show him how to use it carefully. Gently restrain his little hands when he gets rough with it. Put the book away when you must leave him. Never leave him with a book till you are sure the book is safe with him alone.

Be with him also when he begins to use crayons Have the proper materials for him to use them on. Be interested in his crudest scribbles and drawings and able to see the things he says he has made. When he has finished for the time using these crayons but them out of his reach. Danger comes when these crayons lie about the house anywhere.

After he has written in a book or on the walk, unless you saw him do it, express grief at the ugly marks. It is too late then to punish him unless he is four or five, perhaps. Just be more vigilant so he cannot do it again without getting a spanking instantly.

When he begins using a metal toy spend ample time with him to show him just where to use the toy. If at four or five he does scratch furniture or cut some article with scissors, tell him just once about it and promise to smack him soundly the next time you find such things have been done. Then keep your word. Don't ask him if he did it. You know In case this fails just let things go in order to make sure he is supervised enough. Lots of love and companionship when he is good, of course, might do most to cure him.

He Needs Supervision.

When your tot first uses tools, he will need supervision until he has gained considerable skill and satisfaction at doing only what he should do with them. Just to deprive him of his tools or playthings for several days rarely is effective. Denied adequate playthings he is more inclined to be destructive. The more you can help your child to win success from using tools and making things the more you can keep him from marring and destroying property. To accomplish this takes time, of course. Just remember that creative fun is the opposite of destruction I am sure we parents and teachers have not fully sensed the character and citizenship values of creative activity at home and school.

A graded list of toys and tools may be had for postage by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. In like manner you may receive measurements for making a homemade set of blocks which Mrs. Myers and I have designed.

MISS KATHLEEN LEITER FETED AT SUPPER PARTY

Mrs. Richard Painter Entertains at Felver Home For Young Woman, Enlisting In Women's Auxiliary of Marines.

MISS KATHLEEN LEITER of Lucas, who has enlisted in the Women's Auxiliary of the United States Marines, was feted at a supper party and personal shower last evening. Hostess for the party was Mrs. Richard Painter, who entertained at the home of Mrs. Richard Felver, 500 Park avenue west.

Miss Leiter, who has been employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, will leave soon for Hunter college, New York City, for her basic training. She is the first young woman to join the marine corps from Richland county.

Members of the Gabba Gabba club and two guests, Miss Evelyn Choyce and Mrs. Milo Cicolani, were in attendance. The evening was spent socially and at a late hour refreshments were served. Patriotic colors were used for the table decorations.

Mrs. Lindley Named Head of Agenda Class

Mrs. Nellie Lindley was named as the new president of the Agenda class of the First Methodist church when members held election of officers at the Tuesday afternoon meeting.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Lindley were Mrs. A. E. Planck, vice president; Mrs. Ralph Kyle, secretary; Mrs. Fred Frizzell, assistant secretary; and Mrs. Della Richardson, Mrs. J. Harding and Mrs. W. P. Close, teachers.

A short program was given under the direction of Mrs. Planck, when letters from young men of the Methodist church now in the service, were read by Mrs. Richardson. Mrs. Richardson also read a poem. Another poem was presented by Mrs. Pittinger.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served buffet style by the hostess. Appointments were in red, white and blue.

Degree Team Has Routine Meeting

Twenty members and one guest, Mrs. Dora McCullough, were present Monday evening for the meeting of the Degree team of the Pocahontas lodge. The session was held at the home of Mrs. Carl McCullough, East Arch street. Following the routine business session five hundred and bunco was played.

Score prizes were won by Mrs. Mary Baird and Mrs. Rose Traxler. At a late hour refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held Aug. 2 at the home of Mrs. Ray Underwood, 595 South Main street.

Prayer Session Held by Two Church Groups

Members of the Women's Missionary society and Division Three of the United Presbyterian church held a joint prayer session yesterday at the home of Miss Chattie Sullivan, Olivesburg road. The group met at noon for a covered dish dinner. Mrs. Walter Caines was the associate hostess.

Twenty-five were present and participated in the afternoon of prayer. Mrs. A. E. Courtney, president, was in charge of the business session.

Plans were made for a covered dish dinner meeting on Wednesday noon, Aug. 25, at the home of Mrs. Harry Packham, Lexington road. Mrs. H. C. Frome will be the associate hostess.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I do not believe Ruth Hayes ever suffered such a moment of humiliation of her life as when I stepped out of the closet, and she realized that I had been a hidden auditor of the verbal flaying Dicky had just given her. It was bad enough to have had to endure the revelations of her treachery, the knowledge of Jack's contempt, and above all the realization that Dicky knew she had offered herself to Jack and been refused. But to know that another woman, and that one myself, whom she hated, had overheard everything must have been so maddening that it would have been impossible to hold back an outburst of fury.

"Don't you touch me!" she shrieked. "Don't you dare! I'll claw your eyes out if you come near me!"

"Softly! softly!" Dicky admonished her mockingly. "Mrs. Graham won't hurt you if you behave yourself. If you don't, I shall have to stand by while she turns you over her knee and gives you a sample of the chastisement your parents criminally neglected to give you when you were a child."

He suddenly made his tone savage, menacing.

"And don't make any mistake; I mean just that!" he said. Then he spoke to me in his ordinary courteous tones:

"Madge, just take this gat, will you, please? Unload it, and toss it into the closet where you had a box seat for this performance. Interesting, wasn't it?"

"Very," I said briefly, for I had no wish to infuriate Ruth Hayes further. I obeyed Dicky's directions about the gun, and when I came back from the closet, he shot a question at me.

"Got any cord strong enough to hobble this baby's wrists and ankles?" he asked.

I went to my bureau and took from it a ball of cord I kept for doing up parcel post packages.

"I think this will do," I said, and he nodded.

"Perfect!" he commented. "Please cut off two suitable lengths, and then come and take this gun and cover this dame while I tie her up."

I cut the cord as he wished, put down the shears, and as I went toward him with the cord, pulled out my own tiny silencer pistol from its hiding place.

"I have my own gun," I told him. "I'll just hold that on her, if you don't mind."

"Right!" Dicky approved. 'No use taking chances with this lady."

Ruth Hayes decided to take a sarcastic attitude.

"I can't believe my eyes!" she sneered. "High-brown, Puritan Madge, with a revolver, just like a gun-moll!"

"Yes, you'd know more about those," Dicky said judicially. "But don't make any mistake on one point, lady," he said, his voice suddenly steely. "My wife may not be a 'wilderness woman,' but she's a dead shot with a revolver, and she's not a bit nervous. So watch your step while she's holding that gun on you, and don't stage any ructions while I tie your feet and hands. Her trigger finger gets jittery sometimes."

"I know when I'm licked," Ruth Hayes said sullenly, as Dicky began the work of binding her ankles and wrists, while I leveled the revolver at her.

"Now, Madge," he said when he had finished, "you come over here and satisfy yourself that she hasn't any more weapons concealed on her person. Make it a thorough job. Strip her if you have to.

"I'll assure both you and her" —there was mirth in his voice now —"that I'll keep my eyes tightly closed while the party's going on. But I won't let go my grip on her arms, and as she can't kick or claw, you ought to have a comparatively easy time."

As he paused, Ruth Hayes' voice sounded in venomous speech.

"If you do this to me, Madge Graham, I'll take it out of your hide if I have to wait ten years!"

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid I shall have to take that chance," I said evenly.

Disillusioned Girl Asks About 'Hubby'

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl 19 and have been married a year to a man who is ten years older than I am. He is a successful business man. I have my own home, a servant, nice clothes and furniture. Before we were married he was very possessive, and since we've married he is very strict.

My parents died when I was a child, and I've been accustomed to having my own way but my husband demands obedience. He is very kind, but if I disobey him, he whips me and sends me to my room. He says my aunt never taught me to control my temper. I admit I have a temper, but no one is perfect. I do love him very much and I believe he loves me.

My husband says he has to teach me to control myself so that I will be able to bring up our children later on, because if I have "tantrums," so will they, and if I don't obey him, neither will they. Do I sound stupid to you? I really am not. I don't want to leave him, but what can I do?

DISILLUSIONED.

Aren't you doing yourself an injustice when you say you have "tantrums?" It seems to me a modern girl finding herself married to a sadistic husband who whips her, sends her to her room if she "disobeys him," would find "tantrums" too mild a term. Wife-beating is illegal in this country, and a high-spirited girl would probably have such a husband hailed into court, and the judge would deal with his "tantrums."

As for these prospective children, how could any woman treated in such a fashion have any control over children? They'd probably despise such a mother. Before the stork pays you a visit, try and develop a little more independence of character.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This is the problem of my girl friend. She works in a place where there are only four other persons. She likes her work and the office is convenient to her home.

The man in charge of her department is married, well educated but has been worrying her with his attentions. It all started when he heard she had been offered another job, which she had no intention of accepting, and she made that clear to him.

Although he does not touch her, when they are alone in the office he talks for hours of his devotion and love for her. I know she has never led this man on, and has always tried to laugh off his declarations of love. Is there anything else you can advise besides leaving this position and accepting the other offer? My girl friend is only 26, while he is 46 years.

E. M. T.

As you've asked me not to suggest the only sensible plan for your friend, what's to be done? Her attitude sounds inconsistent to me. Girls who take this pose that the attention of a married man is distasteful, and then decline to take another job awaiting them, are often secretly pleased by the conquest. However, is there a genuine conquest?

A good many "old boys" go in for this type of mock devotion these days, to keep, what is almost impossible to get, a good office assistant.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

TOO HIGH FOR YOU

YOUR HAND may be plenty strong enough for an informatory or takeout double if the bid which reaches you is at only the level of one in a minor suit, so that your partner can respond with a bid of just one in a major. But suppose the bid is 1-Spade, or is two of a minor, so that your partner might have to respond with a bid of two on a worthless hand. Are you strong enough to stand that, especially if you are vulnerable?

South adopted an "aggressive" defense against the spade game contract at Table 1. After taking the diamond lead with the K, he led his club 7, which North ruffed. The diamond A put South in for a second club lead, also ruffed by North, and the contract was down. Without those club leads, normal defense would have given the defenders a two-trick set, producing for them two tricks in each minor, plus a trump trick.

But the real point is what could have happened to East if the 2-Spade response to his double had been on a worthless hand, instead of on one just a bit below enough for an original bid. Imagine East raising that to 3-Spades and getting doubled. The slaughter at 3-Spades would have been terrific.

East at the other table was more canny. Realizing he did not want to commit the side to a contract of two if his partner was blank, he passed, whereupon North and South got into trouble. The 3-Diamonds got set three tricks, losing two in spades, two in hearts, one in diamonds and two in clubs as trump leads cut down dummy's ruffing ability. So East was rewarded for his sound pass.

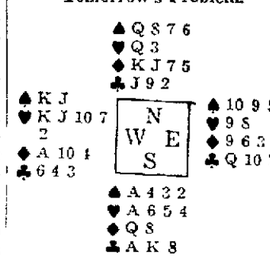
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable).

What is West's soundest lead against 3-No Trumps by South on this deal, and what against 4-Spades? Why in each case?

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, July 15.

A rather adverse or portentous state of affairs is read from the predominant astral influences. Primarily, there seems to be a condition of doubt, confusion, perplexity. Perhaps personal appeal or social influence or intervention may be most powerful in unraveling obscure or threatening situations.

Refrain from impulsive, reckless or erratic moves, lest these estrange and defeat cherished aims or alienate those of sentimental attachment.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of unusual or peculiar situations, calling for much prudence, discretion and direct action in order to circumvent deep laid plans and schemes. While this menace may affect the business or professional associations they are likely to have unhappy and regrettable reactions on the intimate affiliations. There may be estrangements or separations, unless clever grasp and defeat of pernicious forces be exerted.

A child born on this day may be sensitive, perhaps needy and self-conscious to its detriment, causing it sorrow and separation, probably through sinister undercurrents. Its social and sympathetic appeal may assist it to ultimate good fortune and favor.

Take Care of Eyebrows and Eyelashes

By MME. QUI VIVE

A well-shaped forehead with a pleasing hairline plays up the eyes. Neat eyebrows and long silky lashes make elegant trimmings for them. Surrounding flesh, free of crinkles, form a flattering setting. Hence the need of nightly creaming and patting of the tissue to keep them firm and elastic, a little attention to the lid fringes.

Eyebrow stock is going up. These forehead scimitars are getting bigger and better. Instead of killing off the poor things, weeding them down to skin and bones, as it were, they are being coddled in the hope that some of the shafts will play a return engagement. After tweezing for years, it is natural that new hairs will not appear.

Arching follows the natural pattern. Unless one has gone into the study of eyebrows, one wouldn't believe how many different designs the girls have cut out for themselves. There are slanted ones, half circles, some lifted at the ends until they trek up to the temples. We have observed eyebrows that did queer zigzags and we can't say that we can hand them anything in the way of a beauty prize. They can transform Miss Pretty Picture into a brittle caricature.

If you would cultivate a normal growth, brush the eyebrows briskly, touch them with mineral oil, which imparts a pleasing luster. Should it happen that you are weary of the design that you have wrought, seek the attentions of a beauty operator.

After eyebrows are properly shaped, thinned where the thinning is good, extended perhaps with a light touch of crayon, they need but little attention. All one has to do is to pluck the strays that have wandered beyond the fold, and to apply mineral oil or brilliantine to give luster.

Eyelashes thrive under lubrication. You can use petrolatum or mineral oil. These shining curtains make the eyes look dewy, and I understand that dewy eyes have a devastating effect upon the masculine contingent. There's something about misty eyelids and curly, dampish lashes that sets the heart of a man aflutter.

The Very Young sometimes trim their lashes in the hope that the shafts will grow longer. And what happens? Nothing at all. There is just a horrid mess of stubble.

SCIENTISTS GO 'SIMPLY WILD OVER WEEDS'

Call 'Savage Vegetables' Good To Eat, So Quick, Henry, the Lawnmower.

(By International News Service)

LOS ANGELES — Every backyard vacant lot and roadside in the nation today became a Victory Garden in the rough

With the populace pondering ration points furiously planting home gardens and worrying over balanced diets, a number of California scientists have partially simplified the food problem by actually urging citizens to eat weeds

You can get a palatable full-course dinner simply by picking the weeds in your backyard and tossing them into a cooking pot, the scientists declared And the wild vegetables they asserted are super - saturated with vitamins Yum-yum!

Every section of the United States flourishes with at least 20 varieties of common plants which can double for leafy vegetables usually purchased at markets, according to Miss Bonnie Templeton She is chief botanist at the Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art.

The savage vegetables, Miss Templeton maintained, are healthier than their domesticated cousins Backyard weeds have more vitamin content

"Cultivated vegetables," she explained 'are pampered That is, they don t have to struggle for existence They survive because of their great amount of vitamin

If you re suddenly interested in trying a diet of this untamed flora you might follow Miss Templeton's suggestion of selecting weeds that most resemble ordinary vegetables

How about a nice salad?

A type of wild lettuce is common in nearly every locale It usually is a tall plant, growing in shady spots with light green leaves resembling a dandelion The dandelion itself is supposed to make your mouth water but it should be thoroughly boiled to eliminate any bitterness Common ice plant (mesembryanthemum) prevalent on beaches and sand dunes, is "delicious raw," Miss Templeton said

Wild chickory is a bang-up substitute for coffee Just roast the roots and stuff it through a grinder

Young mildweed plants according to the weeds-for-victory advocates, are swell substitutes for asparagus So is the bristle-leaved nettle Ditto stems of baby chicory.

The best understudy for asparagus, however, is the tender shoot of fiddleheads or bracken fern fronds. They grow on the north side of your house. For many years New York epicures have been importing the fern fronds from the Maine woods, believe it or not, Ripley!

Wild mustard is becoming popular for soups and stews It also adds to any salad.

For a "main course" your wild victory garden offers owls clover fritters Merely pluck the pink clover-like flowers, dip 'em in a batter and then fry like corn fritters

Dessert? Aaaahhh! Clamp your molars around some nice preserved elder blossoms Pick the flowers and soak them for an hour in brandy (if you can find any brandy). Then dip the buds in egg batter, and fry in deep fat until brown

Quick, Henry, the lawnmower!

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

BIZERTE—(By Wireless)—One has only to tramp around this desolate city to appreciate what airpower can do. Here in this port city, built by the French, the Axis forces made their last stand a couple of months ago. Americans bombers had the assignment to make Bizerte uninhabitable and render the port facilities unusable so that the Axis forces could not escape from Africa.

How thoroughly that assignment was carried out can be appreciated only by seeing it. I thought Coventry looked bad but it was nothing compared with Bizerte. I believe it is as bad if not worse than Chungking which the Japanese worked on for three years.

Clapper

There is a sharp contrast between the damage done Tunis and Bizerte, resulting from the different needs at the time. Tunis was scarcely damaged except the port area which was shattered. The damage ends on an almost abrupt line. There was no need of trying to destroy the remainder of Tunis but Bizerte had been evacuated of civilians and Axis forces were using the whole place. The Allies considered it necessary to destroy as much as possible. We were able to satisfy our own needs because we had achieved air supremacy in the area.

I spent the day driving many miles through the Tunis-Bizerte region. I saw acres of captured or destroyed Axis materiel, huge piles of wrecked German troop carrier planes as well as fighters and other types heaped up like a junkyard on an airfield which still bears the German name on the entrance pillars. This was the result of air supremacy in this area during the closing days of the Tunisian campaign.

The Allies were able to destroy beyond habitation practically every building in Bizerte. The city simply cannot be used until it is entirely rebuilt. Such military people as must be there occupied a few of the least damaged buildings. The streets were empty. An indication of the complete devastation is that a few strands of emergency telephone wires had been strung to statues which serve as poles amid the shambles extending from one end of the city to the other.

Not a civilian was to be seen on the streets even in midday, not a shop was open, nothing but desolation, a complete ghost city.

There is nothing to prevent similar ruination of one city after another on the continent of Europe as soon as the German fighter defense can be broken which our Fortresses are attempting to do. The Germans apparently are trying hard to conserve their fighters. In the last few days they have sent up fewer fighters than usual. Some missions are returning now without seeing a single Axis fighter in the air.

The ruination of Italian and German cities is certainly coming. Indeed, photographs show that destruction already has begun even before the German fighter defense has been broken. The destruction in the Ruhr will be followed by penetration into deeper areas as the war progresses.

Wandering around Bizerte I could not help but wonder how such a city can be rebuilt. Will it take years? Will the ruins be cleared off and the new structures erected there? Or will the ruins be crumbling stones left to share the curiosity of tourists with the Roman aqueduct and the remains of ancient Carthage?

In any case the rebuilding of damage already suffered in England and the damage that will multiply several fold on the continent will provide work after the war. It will be possible for people to be given jobs for years to come after the armies are demobilized. It may not be possible for people to get rich because we are shooting away the resources and using the labor that would otherwise have gone into living standards for millions. The waste and destruction of war will come out of the future income of the people.

OPENS PROGRAM TO FORESTALL CLOTHES RATION

Nelson Says Plan Will Make Regulation Unnecessary For Duration.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson today put into effect a six-point program designed to make rationing of clothing "unnecessary for the duration of the war."

Nelson, in a formal statement, declared that the program was designed to increase the quantity of textiles available for civilians and to make certain that the available supply is best utilized through proper distribution, use and repair.

Nelson called upon the public to play its part in avoiding clothes rationing by following three rules—"Don't buy more than you need, don't buy it before you need it, and make it last as long as you can."

The WPB chairman in an apparent attempt to lay at rest recurrent rumors that clothes would be rationed declared that wholesalers and retailers had promised full co-operation in the six point program.

As a part of the program Nelson announced retailers had pledged to eliminate "scare" campaigns from their advertising plans as well as other practices that "tempt" people to buy more than they immediately need."

"We need not have clothes rationing in the United States" Nelson asserted. "There is an adequate supply of textiles and textile products to meet all military and essential civilian needs. The major problem is to see that the proper distribution and use is made."

The WPB chairman declared that greater production of textiles would be sought through adoption of three-shift operations in all mills able to do so and protection of the industry's labor supply through the aid of the war manpower commission.

Nelson declared that steps also would be taken to encourage the output of "volume" merchandise of low-priced clothing rather than the concentration of higher-priced fabrics.

FDR EXPECTED TO WIN FIGHT AGAINST RIDER

Points Out Clause Punishes 3 Accused of Subversion Without Trial.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt was expected by observers today to make his bill of attainder charges against congress stick without having to go to court to support his complaint that the legislators violated the constitution.

The phrase, bill of attainder, might be freely defined as a bill of conviction. In this instance, Mr. Roosevelt charges that congress passed such a bill by attaching to an appropriation measure a rider which stipulated that three government officials must be dropped from the federal payrolls not later than Nov. 15 unless they are meantime renominated by the president and confirmed by the senate.

The men involved are Secretary Robert Morss Lovett of the Virgin islands, and two Federal Communications commission employes, Goodwin Watson and William E. Dodd, jr. They were charged by the Dies committee with belonging to organizations deemed to be subversive. Mr. Roosevelt said the rider attempting to remove them from government employment was unwise, discriminatory and unconstitutional.

Mr. Roosevelt outlined to his press conference yesterday the message he intends to send to congress when it convenes Sept. 14. It will argue that the rider is, in fact, a bill of attainder, under a supreme court decision holding that legislation which punishes without judicial trial shall be so considered.

Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that he considered the rider an encroachment by the legislative branch upon the powers of the executive and judicial branches and expressed the opinion that it, therefore, was not binding upon either. He refused to say whether he would go through the motions of renominating any or all of the three men to the jobs they now hold. But it seemed more likely that he simply would instruct the agencies involved to keep them on the payroll.

It then would be up to congress to prove that he was acting other than within his constitutional powers in so doing. Or, it would be possible for the executive department, itself, to seek judicial interpretation of the status of the rider. One way or the other, Mr. Roosevelt may be depended on to fight this issue to the end.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—Under the spreading trees in a blue grass meadow outside Lexington, Ky., some years ago, a lot of sport reporters who had rallied 'round for the Derby put in a happy afternoon covering the auction of the great Belmont stable of running horses.

There were many beautiful steeds, which some of the horsemen referred to collectively by the crass word "stock," including mares with little, leggedy foals at their sides and delicate fillies and rambunctious old stallions who had made their pile in the race and, by way of reward had been retired to a Mohammedan paradise. Some of the Kentuckians were acutely mournful over the disposal of this great family circle of handsome animals and a few got red-eyed.

Pegler

A few days later, over in Louisville, they ran the Derby, the first I had ever seen. And I was so impressed by the tears of some of the Kentuckians, stimulated, perhaps, by the horrible booch that juleps were made of in those days, as they stood and sang with the band, just before the big race, the anthem of their state and of their hearts, "My Old Kentucky Home," that I tried to write something touching about it. It was a very bad job and I was ashamed of such mawkishness as it went to the wire and the more so, and envious, too when, next morning, I read what Damon Runyon had written for the Hearst outfit. I had seen him at his table in the stuffy little firetrap coop, his scrawny jaws working on his wad of gum, and with smoke forking from his nostrils and had wondered what he was up to as he scowled through his piece with the speed of a perfect workman in full command of his story. It happened that he, too, had chosen to sentimentalize over the Kentuckian's love of his country and, expanding, over the pull that draws people ever and ever homeward, if only in memory. Through it ran the phrase "love o' homeland."

It has come back many times and with special freshness and meaning in the last year in conversations with men who have left their homes to fight in the war.

Now Louisville is not such a town as you would sing sad songs about just on sight. It has an untidy river front, many of the noble old homes along with the old families that first occupied them, have fallen on melancholy days, it lies in the hot and muggy river valley and, though it used to be known as the Paris of the South, a center of fashion and society, it is now an industrial town, strictly, with some low-grade sporting life on the Indiana side.

At an M. P. post in the southwestern desert a few months ago, however, I met a boy from Kentucky who longed to see Louisville again and called it "God's home town," a variant of the Englishman's G. O. C. meaning "God's own country." If he had said Lexington he would have had something, for there is the sweetest countryside on earth, but he said Louisville. That was where he wanted to be and nowhere else. And he just wanted to be there, not necessarily to be rich or influential nor even to have a good job as though just to be in Louisville were contentment and perfect peace.

Then I gave a lift to a young English flying cadet, a little on the cockney side, and when, of course, we fell to speaking of the desert he said that frankly it was horrible beyond the worst that his imagination had been able to conjure. That was easy to understand because that was my own first impression of the desert but when he pined for home and said his home was in Islington, which certainly is no beauty spot on the Thames nor an island of wealth and luxury in London, I thought of Runyon's essay and made no issue. He particularly missed the English beer beside which ours was weak and without character and, although he had a short pass to Los Angeles and a look at Hollywood, he wanted to be nowhere but in Islington, the capital, so to speak, the heart, of G. O. C.

In fact he had established a very low opinion of Los Angeles and Hollywood as I remembered later when I met two American flying cadets from Los Angeles who said almost at once that they were from God's country. Some southern coal miners similarly had beautiful memories of their native hills in which I had seen poor settlements, and I have no doubt that even a fellow from South Dakota would have sighed for his homeland as unreasonably as I, in my youth, though of Chicago as the most satisfactory city on earth and of a particular apartment building on an undistinguished street, as home.

There is a young woman in a New England war factory whose heart yearns for the Arizona desert, the strangest fascination of all but a strong one. She came east because in the desert there was no way to earn more than the barest, poverty-level existence and she and her husband, a Connecticut mill-town boy, landed jobs here. But one night a couple of years ago I had given them a lift home when their car broke down and the girl, who had had some university education, praised the desert beautifully. They had been away a year then and had come back to find that the desert rats had stolen their fences and the doors and windows and even some of the 'dobe bricks from the walls of their little house, but they had patched up somehow and were managing to live.

"Some people don't like it at first," she said, "but it gets you. I love it and hope I never have to leave it again."

Love o' homeland.

That explains why Irvin Cobb loves Paducah.

PLANTS HIT

Ashland Factories Damaged By Electrical Storm.

An electrical storm which hit the Mansfield area at 7 p. m., yesterday caused no serious damage here but damaged two Ashland factories and disrupted power lines.

The A. L. Garber Publishing company at Ashland was closed three hours this morning while repairs were being made on the company's power lines. Lightning struck the power circuit and burned out several transformers.

Similar damage was reported at the Toycraft Rubber company, which operates 24 hours a day. The company was closed for half an hour.

Power lines in several sections of the city were struck, plunging those sections into darkness. Repairmen from Ohio Public Service company were repairing damage this morning. No estimate of the financial loss to the factory and publishing company was made.

'LAST RESORT'

Legislator Says Treasury To Ask 10 Per Cent Sales Tax.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Rep. Bertrand W. Gearhart, R., Calif., a member of the house ways and means committee, said today that he expected the treasury to submit a tax program in September which would include a 10 per cent national sales tax and compulsory joint income tax returns for married couples.

Gearhart, who sided with the treasury in its recent fight against the Ruml pay-as-you-go plan, said he thought the sales tax would be proposed as a "last resort" in efforts to raise an estimated $12,000,000,000 in new revenue for 1944.

Gearhart also predicted that the treasury would ask for increased income taxes for lower-bracket taxpayers, special excises on liquor and tobacco, a super 100 per cent "confiscatory" levy on all incomes over $25,000 after taxes, and new imposts on travel.

COFFEE $20 IN CHINA

LOS ANGELES — (U.P.) — As a tip-off on inflation, Mrs. David S. Tappan, formerly a missionary on the Chinese island of Hainan, where inflation has gone beyond control, reports that a can of coffee there now costs 420 Chinese dollars, or $20 in American money. Room and board in Free China comes at 100 Chinese dollars a day, she reports.

FONDA NAMED IN PATERNITY SUIT

Barbara Thompson Says He's Father of Her Baby Daughter, Sharon.

(By International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—For the second time in as many months Hollywood was buzzing today over a paternity suit filed in superior court against one of the film capital's celebrities, the later of whom is Henry Fonda, now on duty with Uncle Sam's navy.

Barbara Thompson brought the action against Actor Fonda. She charged that he is the father of her baby girl, Sharon, who was born last June 21. The suit did not identify Fonda's accuser but merely stated that she and the actor had never been married.

Coming on the heels of a similar charge filed against Comedian Charles Chaplin by his former protege, Joan Barry, Miss Thompson's action asked $2,000 monthly support for the baby, $5,000 hospital bills, $2,500 court costs and $10,000 for attorney fees.

The Chaplin case has been set aside until Miss Barry's unborn child is four months old, when blood tests will be taken in an effort to determine whether Chaplin is the father.

Fonda, a quartermaster in the navy, is stationed at the navy base at Bremerton, Wash. Mrs. Frances Fonda, the actor's wife, declared there was nothing to the charge brought by Miss Thompson. "It's not true. I know it isn't true," she declared.

She was told of the suit by Fonda's studio, Twentieth Century-Fox.

Mrs. Fonda said she had returned a short time ago from a month's visit with her husband at Seattle, near where he is stationed. The actor's wife and her three children, one by a former marriage, live in suburban Brentwood.

If your gas supply has been getting low or you have been desperately hungry for good beefsteak and maybe had some idea that if things continued you might some night get into the ration board office and help yourself to a few stamps, forget it. It's too late. The ration board officials are just one jump ahead of anyone wth ideas to help himself to those precious stamps. Today they were busy installing a new safe and storing away all valuables against fire, burglary and who knows what might happen.

DENIES PLEA TO EXTRADITE PAIR

Indiana Governor Refuses To Act Against Couple Who Kidnaped Own Child.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Gov. Henry Schricker of Indiana today notified Gov. Bricker that he had refused a request to extradite Mr. and Mrs. Percival Lehmkuhle, Waynedale, Ind., to Ohio to face charges that they kidnapped their eight-year-old daughter, Ladonna, from Defiance, O., last January.

Emory Glander, Bricker's secretary, said the extradition request was made in behalf of Defiance county authorities after the couple was indicted for child stealing.

The indictment charged that Lehmkuhle went to Defiance last January, took his daughter out of school and took her to Indiana despite a ruling by the court of appeals awarding the child to the custody of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Batts of Defiance.

The child originally was awarded to the custody of the Defiance couple by written agreement with the Lehmkuhles. The parents later brought suit to recover the child and common pleas court decided in favor of the Defiance couple.

Glander said the child's parents originally agreed to give her to Mr. and Mrs. Batt because of domestic difficulties.

In his refusal to sign extradition papers, Gov. Schricker said he "felt the home must be maintained at all costs."

GIRL ATTACKED

Claims 3 Men Forced Her Into Auto; Admits Drinking.

Police today were investigating the story of a 17-year-old girl who said she was forced into an automobile last night by three men and taken outside the city and attacked.

The girl told officers that the men held her in custody for three hours during which time she had "several drinks" with them.

She said she had left a theater and was waiting for a taxi to take her home when the men drove to the curb, two of them forcing her into the car.

They took her to a side road, where she said two of the men held her while the third attacked her. She was released at East Fourth street and Ashland road about 2:30 a. m. She said the license plates of the car had been covered.

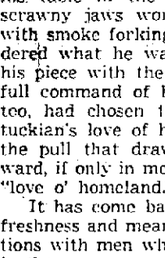
ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I HAVE never been able to understand the attitude in the legitimate theater that assumes (with exceptions, of course) that the level of performance is bound to sink after a show has been running a long time.

I was reminded of this rather abruptly the other evening when I revisited one of the town's hits which has been on the board's for a gratifying number of months, and found, that, while the actors made all their entrances and said all their lines, the sparkle and excitement which had put the show in the success class at the outset had completely disappeared.



Kilgallen

The theater is the only business I can think of where that sort of backsliding is countenanced, and the boys who control such things should put an end to it as rapidly as possible. The old excuse that repetition dulls anything is a flimsy one, and shouldn't be used by actors whose one prayer on an opening night is that the gods and the critics will be good enough to insure their repeating the performance night after night and two matinees a week for a year.

A tailor who presses a suit badly, a cook who serves an inferior meal, a secretary whose typing deteriorates—none of these people can beg off by protesting that they've been doing the same thing for years, and are getting bored. But show people are inclined to claim this privilege, and they do so while the box office continues to charge the same prices levied when the show was benefiting by their most enthusiastic performances.

Of course, there are a number of conscientious producers and directors who revisit their hits frequently to make sure the cast hasn't taken to skylarking and embroidering, which is as bad as exhibiting signs of acute fatigue. But the point is that they all should do it and do it often.

It wouldn't be a bad idea if a long-running show was reviewed periodically by the first-nighters, just to see that the customers in May are still seeing the same production that was so highly recommended in December.

WESTINGHOUSE RECEIVES 'E' AT PROGRAM TODAY

Colorful Ceremony, With High Army, Navy Officials Here, Follows Plant Tour.

East Fourth and Wayne street parking lot. Music for the occasion was presented by the UERWA Local 711 band.

Major Hanley presented the "E" banner, symbolic of excellence in production, to C. L. VanDerau, works manager, and James Anderson, vice president of Local 711, UERWA. The plant representatives received the flag on behalf of all employes.

Sharing the "E" presentation stage with Major Hanley was Commander W. B. Bacon, senior asistant to the inspector of naval materiel, Cleveland district, who presented "E" pins to Westinghouse workers.

Five company employes with service records totaling more than 100 years were recipients of the pins. As they received their awards, all other employes assembled before the platform removed their pins from envelopes and placed them on themselves.

The presentation followed an inspection tour of the plant by military officials and a delegation of 15 magazine and newspaper writers here for the occasion.

The plant tour was conducted by Ralph Bisbee, quality control manager, and just before the presentation there was a demonstration on how two-pound chunks of steel are transformed into armor-piercing shots in 80 seconds.

High army and navy officials arrived before noon today for the "E" ceremony — third Mansfield has had since May.

Maj. Gen. Hanley, commanding general of the U. S. Air Forces southeast training command, arrived at Mansfield airport by plane at 10:30 a. m., where he was greeted by a delegation of plant officials.

On his way to Mansfield he was given a salute at Columbus when 20 Flying Fortresses from Lockbourne air base met him before his arrival there.

News dispatches from Columbus said it was the largest mass appearance of bombers Columbus residents have seen. General Hanley is the son of T. J. Hanley of Mansfield.

Milton Cross noted radio announcer and music commentator, was master of ceremonies, taking over the program after being introduced by John H. Ashbaugh, manager of the Appliance division of the company.

FDR RENEWS HIS VOW TO FRANCE

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Frenchmen, observing today the 154th anniversary of Bastille day, received fresh assurance from President Roosevelt that one of the United Nations' war aims is the return of freedom to "the peoples now under the invaders' yoke."

"There must be no doubt, anywhere, of the unalterable determination of the United Nations to restore to the oppressed peoples their full and sacred rights," the chief executive said last night in a statement commemorating the fall of the bastille, notorious prison, during the French revolution.

Provides Music For 'E' Presentation

The United Electrical Workers Local 711 band provided musical numbers at this afternoon's presentation of the Army-Navy "E" award to the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. The band is directed by Frank Dekrell and has played for numerous public functions here.

40 TO GALLON

Dupont Says More Mileage In Gas When War's Over.

WILMINGTON, Del. — (INS) — Brother, listen to this—

E. I. Dupont de Nemours and company, who made those nylon stockings for the gals before they turned exclusively to war production, say they can give you 40 miles to a gallon of gas. The only hitch is you can't get it until after the war.

Gasoline now used to feed high-power airplanes will be available to civilians after the war. Eye-dropper quantities of lead tetraethyl, a chemical compound, added to regular gasoline, is the magic potion that will give 40 miles to the gallon.

TELL OWI U. S. PLAIN FACTS

Editors Say Truth Will Guarantee Morale

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Editors and publishers called in by the Office of War Information (OWI) for advice on its program expressed confidence today in the American public's ability to take the good news with the bad, and suggested that the government keep the people apprised "of what is going on" as a "certain guarantee" of high morale.

This view was emphasized in a statement issued yesterday by an advisory committee chosen by Palmer Hoyt, new director of OWI's domestic bureau. The group elected by Roy Roberts, managing editor of the Kansas City Star, as chairman.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(U.P.)—Cinderellas grow on the bushes in California. CONCERT BY LOCAL 711 BAND HIGHLIGHT OF 'E' CEREMONY

The United Electrical Workers Local 711 military band, under the direction of Frank Dekrell, and the Westinghouse Glee club, led by Lawrence Chamberlain, presented a concert of patriotic numbers at the company's Army-Navy "E" ceremony today.

Organized just a year and a half ago, the band has made many appearances at patriotic and community functions in Mansfield. Support and sponsorship for the band is provided by U. E. R. M. W. of A. Local No. 711. Its purpose is to make a civic and patriotic constribution in music to the community.

There are 26 members in the band. They play for the pleasure they derive and the band receives no fees for its appearances. When rehearsals or band appearances require members to be absent from work, their time is paid by Local 711.

In the past year, the band has made 22 public appearances including three formal concerts, two public rallies sponsored by the AFL-CIO public affairs committee, Labor day and Decoration day parades, the movie stars' bond rally, the Jap submarine and several going-away parties for men entering the service.

After marching in the 1942 Labor day parade in Mansfield, the band traveled to Cleveland and participated in the large parade there. It was given the position of honor band in the parade and appeared before a crowd estimated at 100,000 persons.

Dekrell, the band director, was born in Budapest, Hungary. He began his musical studies at the age of six years. Playing the violin and cornet, Dekrell has held band and orchestral positions in Europe and America since his high school days. He came to this country in 1928. He is a toolmaker and has been employed at the Westinghouse plant for several years. He rehearses the band regularly each Monday evening and oftener when preparations are being made for a special program.

REPORTS PLAN FOR MORE MEAT

Speaker Says Program Would Aid Civilians.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— D. C. Speaker disclosed today that the office of price administration was developing a plan designed to bring about a major increase in civilian meat rations.

Speaker, unofficial but authoritative capital spokesman, declared the plan has influential backing within OPA, but it has not yet been adopted officially and it still must hurdle the highly controversial issue of putting price ceilings on live hogs and cattle.

Speaker explained that the proposed larger rations might become available for a short-term period only—probably until next spring—unless the supply of livestock improved.

MIRACLE COURSE

DENVER —(INS)— The women's war class in engineering fundamentals at the Colorado university extension class in Denver has been dubbed a "miracle course" by teachers.

"Imagine turning out a junior engineer and a woman at that in 410 hours of study—but it's being done and employers like the women workers so well that they're asking for more," said Prof. Warren Raeder, coordinator of the program.

GET EDUCATION

HATTIESBURG, Miss.—(INS)—Mississippi Southern college at Hattiesburg has become one of the first institutions of higher learning in the United States to adopt the new health education course recommended by the government for the training of rural teachers to carry on health work in other schools.

Sponsored by the Mississippi state board of health, Dr. D. V. Galloway and Dr. D. R. Patterson, of the state board of health, are in charge.

ARCTIC TESTER

EVANSTON, Ill. — (INS) — A man-made Arctic, with a temperature 78 degrees below zero, is being used today to develop polar equipment for American fighting men.

The "low temperature room" at Northwestern university's technological institute is believed by scientists to be the coldest ever attained for full-scale research.

'AFROMOBILE'

PALM BEACH, Fla.—(U.P.)—The "afromobile"— bicycle-wheelchair used by tourists in the early 1900s—has staged a comeback as a means of transportation in this resort city.

Recent government edicts on pleasure driving has brought back the three-wheeled vehicle which served here as a taxi before the automobile came into use. The afromobiles were pedaled by Negroes, who charged tourists and residents fares for rides.

An American armored division requires 78,000 pounds of food every day it is in action.

and ease in storing and shipping" canned foods are in great military demand, the administration said that "this necessitates greater use by civilians of home-canned foods and the fresh products."

In its first announcement of allocations on a yearly basis, the WFA on Monday said civilians would receive 80 per cent of prospective butter production, 55 per cent of cheese and 43 per cent of evaporated milk this year.

Subsequent announcements are expected allocating meat and perhaps eggs and dry beans and peas. Allocations will be re-examined after the first quarter and possibly revised on the basis of changing demand or supply.

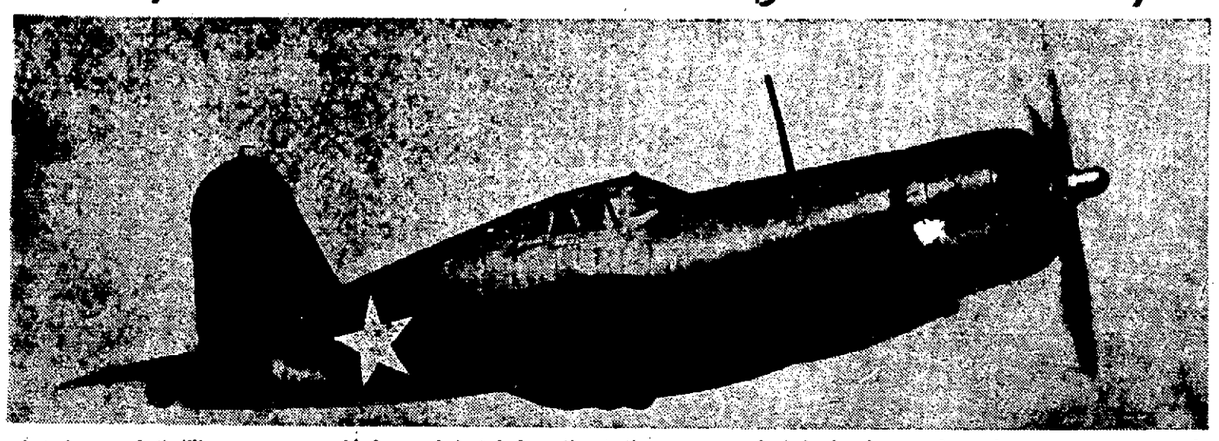
In making its "strategic allocations" of food stuffs, the WFA said the program would meet civilian nutritional needs but would "not leave as much for civilians as they have money enough to buy."

The canned foods allocation will be:

Canned fruits and juices—total estimated supply, 61,136,000 cases; military, 24,490,000; contingency reserve, 3,500,000; lend-lease, 279,000; other exports and shipments, 258,000, and U. S. civilians, 32,609,000. Civilian consumption in 1942 was 51,500,000 cases.

Canned vegetables—total estimated supply, 262,538,000 cases; military, 67,710,000; contingency reserve, 10,000,000; lend-lease, 3,140,000; other exports and shipments 1,502,000, and U. S. civilians, 18 ,186,000. Civilian consumption in 1942 was 226,200,000 cases.

Navy Corsairs Take Part In Westinghouse 'E' ceremony



A unique and thrilling compliment was paid to Westinghouse employes today when a flight of three U. S. Navy FG-1 Corsairs roared over the assembled crowd just before the "E" ceremony. Famous as the world's fastest shipboard fighter planes, Corsairs and their U. S. Navy pilots are becoming the scourge of Axis bombers round the world. The flight making the special trip here for the "E" ceremony was to swoop over the crowd in a formation flight demonstration just before the program got under way. As the Corsairs flew over, employes and the public had the chance to see Westinghouse war products in actual use. Corsair wing flaps are being produced in the aircraft section of Mansfield works for Goodyear Aircraft.

Ohio C. of C. Seeks Food Problem Relief

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — The Ohio Chamber of Commerce said today that a national food crisis was the result of inept federal administration, a backward growing season and farm labor and machinery shortage.

The Chamber said it was enlisting all its facilities to spur state, federal and business agencies to adopt measures immediately to relieve the food administration.

George B. Chandler, executive vice president, said that of first importance is "the re-enactment of the law of supply and demand."

"Farmers are desperate for labor, but they cannot obtain it without paying wages commensurate with those of industry," he said. "To meet such wages the farmer must have increased prices for his produce."

Chandler proposed that a survey be made of state and county department activities to determine what could be curtailed in order to give immediate assistance to farmers. He also proposed furloughing of soldiers experienced in farm work.

TAUGHT CRAFTS

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—Sailors and marines at the Oak Knoll hospital in Oakland, Cal., can still send their best girl a charm bracelet, or a bit of weaving to their mothers. And some of the boys will be making their own gifts.

This is a result of the opening of the Craft shop, where recuperating men able to be out will find recreation under Red Cross supervision. The "Grey Ladies," who have been on duty since the hospital opened, also will conduct hand craft programs in the wards.

PRAISES BEE

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Dr. Leonard Clark of the biology department, Union college, isn't so sure that those buying bonds or working in defense plants should receive all the credit for contributing to the nation's war effort.

He says the tiny honey bee is doing its bit by producing beeswax as a coating for shells and airplanes, "increasing farm crops through pollination of flowers and providing honey as a supplement to America's sugar rationing.

HAWAII TAPS RUBBER TREES

Islanders Cut Paths Through Jungle To Reach Forgotten Natural Resource.

MAUNAWILI, Oahu, T. H. (U.P.)—First home-grown rubber has started to trickle into the nation's wartime stockpile from Hawaii, but production soon is expected to reach the equivalent of thousands of new automobile tires monthly.

On this island and Maui there are thousands of rubber trees which have not been tapped for more than 30 years.

After the turn of the century, vast numbers of the trees were planted, but the commercial ventures failed and the rubber plantations were forgotten. The plantations since have reverted to semi-jungles.

Territorial Governor Ingram M. Stainback recently watched the tapping of 1,200 rubber trees at Maunawili. It was the Governor's idea that, although the amount would be small in comparison with national demands, Hawaii's trees should contribute all latex possible to help alleviate the shortage.

Paths have been cut through jungles to 5,000 trees at Nahiku, Maui, and soon crude rubber from that island will find its way into the nation's stockpile.

Inasmuch as the trees have not been tapped for more than three decades, officials are not sure as to the exact number of productive trees in the territory, but cursory surveys indicate the total may reach 10,000 or more.

"It is not a commercial enterprise," Governor Stainback said, "but rather a wartime measure to augment, in a very small way, the nation's crude rubber supply."

SEES POETS WRITING MORE

REDLANDS, Cal.—(U.P.)—President E. L. Nelson of the University of Redlands predicts that gasoline rationing will result in an increased mileage of poetry. "Because poets canont drive their automobiles," he said, "they will get bored and nervous and start writing poetry on any idea that comes along."
